Pair Will Survey Line Possibilities

Halifax to Be Next Halt; Plane Has Pontoons, Pitch Propeller.

New York, July 9 (U.P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his wife flew northeastward tonight on the first leg of an aerial survey of northern air lanes across the Atlantic.

They left North Beach Airport at College Point, N. Y., at 3:40 p. m. (Eastern daylight time) in their pontoon-equipped Lockheed Sirius monoplane and were reported in radio advices, to have alighted on the water near Rockland, Me., at 6:10 p. m., because of fog.

Rockland is only about 25 miles from the North Haven, Me., summer home of Mrs. Lindbergh's mother, Mrs. Dwight Morrow. The fliers did not go there immediately, however.

Weather Is Unfavorable.

The first scheduled stop of the Lindberghs had been Halifax, N. S. Presumably they received radio reports informing them of extremely unfavorable flying weather in that locality. Mrs. Lindbergh is the plane's radio operator and navigator.

Radiomarine Corporation said its advices were direct from the plane, reporting "all O. K." on the flight north. The message made public here was picked up by the R. C. A. station at Chatham, Mass., it was said.

The taciturn Lindbergh gave no hint of his destination when he left the airport at College Point. Airport officials said afterward, however, that he had enough gasoline for a 2,000-mile flight and would make his first stop at Halifax.

The ultimate destination of the Lindberghs is Iceland. They plan to stop at Greenland en route. They plan to survey prospects of establishing a new "Lindbergh trail" by which planes can travel between the United States and Europe with intermediary stops over the far-northern route.

Often Flown Together.

The flight is the first major one the Lindberghs have undertaken since the tragedy of the kidnaping of their son. The summer previously they had flown together to the Orient.

The flight was planned and begun in the typical Lindbergh manner. Weeks ago Col. Lindbergh began his preparations. He gathered quantities of data on the area he is traversing. His plane, the same one in which the trip to the Orient was made, has been completely reconditioned. For days it has been at the works of the Edo Corporation at College Point, being equipped with specially designed pontoons. Almost daily Col. Lindbergh has been at the plant inspecting and supervising the work. He has devoted himself to little else, and has become a familiar figure around the town, slipping into a little German restaurant for food and then going back to the plant.

Illinois Will Ratify Repeal Plan Today

Springfield, Ill., July 9 (A.P.).—The formality of completing Illinois' ratification of proposed repeal of the eighteenth amendment will take little more than an hour tomorrow, delegates to the convention indicated tonight.

The constitutional convention of 50 delegates chosen in the election of June 9 will meet at noon in the statehouse. Because the law creating the convention specified it should meet in the hall of the representatives, it was believed the convention would convene there, notwithstanding the damage it sustained by water in today's capitol fire, recessing to meet elsewhere in the building, if necessary.

As all 50 delegates were from the repealists' list of candidates in the election, the vote making Illinois tenth State to complete ratification of the twenty-first amendment which repeals the eighteenth will be unanimous.

Blaze Sweeps State's Capitol; $250,000 Lost

Illinois Governor Directs Saving of Records in 4-Hour Blaze.

Springfield, Ill., July 9 (A.P.).—Fire that raged through a portion of the Illinois Statehouse, destroying records and damaging the edifice considerably, was extinguished by firemen tonight after it had burned about four hours.

Thousands of valuable documents were destroyed.

A portion of the roof of the south wing fell in. No one was reported injured.

Gov. Henry Horner and other State officials rushed to the scene to direct the saving of records.

The fire was confined to the south wing and apparently started on the fourth floor housing the offices of the State architect and the division of oil inspection.

The flames crept upward toward the top of the six-story wing. Floors below were damaged by water as firemen played hose throughout the wing.

Water dripped down into the assembly room of the House of Representatives, damaging furnishings. The assembly chamber is on the third floor.

While State officials would make no definite estimate of the damage already done, they said it apparently would exceed $250,000.

Nazis and Reds Beaten In Finland's Election

Helsingfors, Finland, July 9 (U.P.).—Nazi and Communist candidates were overwhelmingly defeated in general elections throughout the country today, late returns tonight indicated. They failed to gain a single seat in Parliament.

Social Democrats showed the greatest strength, gaining 13 seats in the election for a total of 79 as compared with 66 in the old Parliament. Other major party results included: Agarians, 53 seats; Conservative Election Union, 32; Swedish Peoples party, 20; Progressive party, 11; and the small Holders party, 3 seats.

France Gets Big Gold Shipment From U. S.

Cherbourg, France, July 9 (A.P.).—A shipment of gold valued at $4,250,000, consigned to the Bank of France, arrived on the Europa today. This more than covered the bank's loss last week, which was its first in seven weeks.

The shipper of the gold, brought on the vessel from the United States, was not announced. The gold was in 78 kegs, presumably "earmarked." It was reported here that the Aquitania, due on July 11, is bringing $5,000,000 gold for French banks.

Litvinoff May Receive Nobel Award for Peace

London, July 10 (Monday) (U.P.).—Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Russia's foreign commissar, will be awarded the Nobel peace prize this year, a Moscow dispatch to the Daily Express reported today. The dispatch said the information came from "an excellent authority."

Litvinoff, now on a holiday on the continent after attending the economic conference here, has been active for some years in promoting arms limitation and treaties of nonaggression.

Threat Made On Confessed Farm Slayer

Hired Laborer Admits Killing Woman "at Her Request."

Says She Couldn't Bear Thought of Tilling Soil Without Him.

The neighbors of Mrs. Evelyn Reifschneider, 47-year-old farm woman, are openly threatening to take Page Jupiter, alias Jennifer, her confessed slayer, from the county jail at La Plata, Md., and mete out to him their concept of justice.

Those who knew Mrs. Reifschneider were aroused to a high pitch of indignation when the crime was committed and this was accentuated early yesterday when the suspect calmly admitted that he had cleaved the woman's skull with an ax at her own request.

He denied that he had criminally assaulted the woman, but admitted that he had intimate relations with her. When news of the confession reached the angry crowd of 65 men, who gathered in front of the county courthouse, there were shouts of "Turn him over to us, we'll take care of him," and "let us have him."

Mob Temporarily Pacified.

This crowd was temporarily pacified by Deputy Sheriff Russell Howard, who told the men that "Jupiter" was to be charged with murder and assault. The crowd, which was seemingly without organization, reluctantly moved away, muttering therats of an early return. The prisoner is confined in the county jail in the rear of the Charles County Courthouse. It is a two-story red brick structure, surrounded by a wire mesh fence, topped with barb wire. There is only an aged keeper in charge.

Neighbors of the Reifschneider family threatened that the prisoner would "be taken care of right soon, because its the awfulest thing that ever happened down in this country."

Others were more level-headed, adjured them to "let the law take its course." The confession of "Jupiter" came yesterday after he had been grilled for several hours by States Attorney Edward G. Edelin, Sheriff Vernon Cooksey and Maryland State Police Sergt. Louis Bloom. He had denied his complicity in the killing for several hours, but he was unable to explain the blood stains which were found on his shirt, trousers and on a pack of tobacco in his pocket.

Officers Discount Threats.

He was charged with murder and assault in a warrant sworn out by Justice of the Peace R. H. Lee Reich. Both State's Attorney Edelin and Mr. Reich discounted the threats which sifted through La Plata, characterizing them as "just talk."

The interrogator failed to break Jupiter's story that he had killed

Goemboes Seeks Treaties' Revision

Hungary Head Says They Are Retarding Recovery in Danubian States.

Vienna, July 9 (A.P.).—Premier Julius Goemboes, of Hungary, after a conference today with Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, of Austria, said economic restoration of the Danubian countries can be had at the price of revision of the post war treaties.

Without revision, he said, there can be no real solution to the economic problems arising out of the World War. He said he came to Vienna to discuss economic cooperation with Austria and "also other questions."

Austria and Hungary are mutually interested in practically all vital questions today, said the premier.

"We are the keys to the Danube problem: Without us there can be no solution," he said, adding that to achieve a solution mutual sacrifices are necessary. Austria and Hungary will do their share, he asserted, and others must, too.

Mrs. Roosevelt Starts Motor Trip to Vermont

Plattsburg, N. Y., July 9 (A.P.).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt left here by automobile tonight for Mount Mansfield, Vt., after visiting Au Sable Chasm and other scenic spots in this vicinity.

During her brief stop here she was the guest of former Lieut. Gov. Thomas F. Conway. On a vacation trip to Montreal and Quebec, the First Lady drove to Plattsburg from Lake Placid. She was accompanied by Miss Lorena A. Hickok, of New York.

Fight to Save Parley Work Made by Hull

Strives to Assure Vote Today Authorizing Continuance.

U. S. Delegation Ready to Offer Practical World Program.

London, July 9 (U.P.).—Secretary of State Cordell Hull, chairman of the United States delegation to the World Economic Conference, conferred with heads of other delegations tonight in a desperate effort to assure a majority favorable vote in the steering committee tomorrow on the question of continuing the parley.

The conversations were held in the utmost privacy. The United Press was informed that the United States delegation was prepared to offer a practical program for discussion by the conference if the delegates vote to carry on.

This program on which the Nations may unite was believed to be based on a huge credit expansion plan for a series of international public works projects to restore work to the millions of unemployed.

See Buying Uplift.

The Americans feel this would tend to bring up commodity prices in many lines, particularly the materials needed for billions of dollars worth of public works, and that this also would restore millions of men as wage-earners to the purchasing market. The price of goods such as food and clothing essentials then would rise.

Some such practical scheme as this could be worked out by the economic conference, Secretary Hull's group feels, as indicated by Senator James Couzens' speech last Friday along those lines. Hull tonight sought to convince a majority of the steering committee that this program would be sufficient to keep the economic gathering in being and that it need not collapse in failure to agree upon currency stabilization.

The conference goes into its fifth week with little confidence, however, among the delegations of the 66 nations represented. Hull believed he had a seven to six line-up in favor of continuing, but doubt prevailed in many quarters that the steering committee would fall in line.

Its immediate problem is whether the conference is to continue fully or to exclude definitely all discussion of monetary questions, as the gold bloc nations now desire, since stabilization has been excluded through the stand of President Roosevelt against it at this time.

Future in Doubt.

If monetary questions are eliminated, most of the delegations probably will withdraw forthwith, leaving what work may yet be done to commissions of experts. Although the monetary subcommittee for immediate measures on monetary reform voted last week to report to the bureau its willingness to discuss all questions, the bureau has the right to sustain or overrule the report of any subcommittee.

Britain Is Pressed To Increase Prices

London (Monday), July 10 (U.P.).—Pressure on Great Britain to follow President Roosevelt's price-raising program is increasing.

The Daily Mail in today's issue states that Mr. Roosevelt should be assisted by the rest of the world to the utmost degree consistent with safety, adding that he alone has provided a constructive policy, not limiting himself to paying lip-service to world recovery.

The article said the paper's financial expert welcomed indications that Britain is likely to follow cautiously in the steps of the United States and hopeful the gold bloc nations might follow Britain.

The Daily Mail also was hopeful of seeing controlled synchronized inflation throughout the world.

$68,000,000 in Scrip Burned in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, July 9 (A.P.).—Officials of the Los Angeles Clearing House Association watched $68,000,000 in paper money go up in smoke today. It wasn't worth a dime, however, even before the 365 packages of currency were saturated in crude oil and tossed into a great incinerator.

The paper represented the 13,000,000 scrip certificates that were printed on authority of the clearing house in the bank holiday four months ago, but never used.

Strike of 1,000 Sound Technicians Ties Up Columbia Studios.

NANCY CARROLL.

Hollywood, July 9 (A.P.).—Nancy Carroll and Allan Dinehart are among the film players immediately affected by the strike of 1,000 members of the Sound Technicians Union and allied trades which has tied up all production at the Columbia motion picture studio. Pictures in which they were under contract will be delayed.

Samuel J. Briskin, general manager of the studio, said two full-length feature pictures and some shorts were in the making when the strike was called last night. He said the strike was called without the studio being given any warning, but Harold Smith, business representative of the sound union, said it followed negotiations lasting several months.

"We have been trying to get a wage adjustment with the Columbia studio and have failed," Smith said. "Almost 40 other independent producers have met our wage scale."

Briskin said the technicians' salary demands were exorbitant, and that in some instances increases of 250 per cent were asked.

Daring Policy In Maintaining Franc Pledged

Premier Says Gold Is Safe and Hints Accord Near on War Debts.

Paris, July 9 (A.P.).—France's battle plans to defend her golden Franc, her trade and her prestige were outlined by Premier Edouard Daladier today in a rousing speech surveying the future.

On the eve of the campaign which six gold bloc countries launched yesterday to support their currencies and throttle speculation against gold through their central banks, the premier assured the country that its money was safe and promised a "youthful policy"—vigorous, daring, but never too venturesome—to keep it so.

He announced he would summon Parliament in October to arm the government for the anti-inflation fight by balancing the budget, pledged rapid repayment of the British loan, said France was able to meet all her bills and intimated that the war debt difficulties with the United States would be adjusted.

Meanwhile Lucien Lamoureux, budget minister, announced in a speech that measures would be sought to salvage France's trade from the threat of the cheapened dollar and pound.

M. Daladier, speaking at APT, said the government was convinced that stability of moneys is necessary to control production as a means of economic betterment, adding that it "wishes neither a closed door policy nor one of self-sufficiency."

"Determined to defend France and let nothing harm the national money," the premier declared, "we will recall Parliament beginning in October and invite it to crown the work necessary to public safety by a final straightening out of our finances."

Porter, Archeologist, Missing in Small Boat

Dublin, Irish Free State, July 9 (A.P.).—Arthur Kingsley Porter, noted American archeologist, has been missing since Saturday morning from his bungalow on Inishbofin Island, where he lived part of the summer.

Porter left the island in a small sailing boat and has not been seen since. The severest thunderstorm in years occurred in the district Saturday, and it was feared his boat may have been struck by lightning or met with some other disaster.

Child Labor Abolition Hailed by Roosevelt in Signing Textile Code

(Associated Press.)

The cotton textile code was signed by President Roosevelt last night after reading every word of it aloud in the presence of Maj. Gen. Hugh Johnson, administrator of industrial recovery, and a group of the Cabinet members, including Secretaries Roper and Ickes. Thereafter Mr. Roosevelt dictated the following statement:

"I have just approved the cotton textile code, subject to certain modifying conditions, clarifying, but not greatly affecting the proposals as submitted.

"Many significant circumstances attend this result:

"Child labor in this industry is here abolished. After years of fruitless efforts and discussions this ancient atrocity went out in a day, because this law permits employers to do by agreement that which none of them could do separately and live in competition.

"In the eyes of the whole public, there was a great conference among the very leaders of our industry, labor and social service, presided over by the Government. It considered the most controverted questions in the whole economic problem—wages and hours of labor—and it brought that question to a definite conclusion.

"It dealt with facts and facts only. There was not one word of accusation. And most remarkable

First Federal-Business Accord Seen as Step Toward New Era.

(Associated Press).

President Roosevelt last night hastened his industrial recovery program into effect with approval of the cotton textile code.

He hailed the putting into effect of this first of the industrial codes with a statement declaring it the "achievement of cooperation, mutual understanding and good will."

He declared the abolishment of child labor in the industry provided by the agreement which sets up a $12 and $13 minimum wage in the South and North, respectively, and a 40-hour maximum week, as one of the outstanding points in a new era of American business.

The code for the first time in history provides a minimum wage for workers in the industry and a maximum of 40-hours a week of work for each employee.

Effective Within One Week.

The agreement becomes effective on July 17—within one week.

Seventy-seven per cent of the industry have subscribed to the code. Mr. Roosevelt in a supplementary statement to the code, insisted that the other 23 per cent be given opportunity to be heard.

Among the divisions of the industry given a temporary exemption were the automobile tire and medical supplies groups. They had contended that the maximum hour and minimum wage provision would work a severe hardship if applied immediately.

Discretion is left with the industrial administrator as to the time for these hearings. There was every indication last night, however, that Maj. Gen. Johnson, the industrial administrator, intends to hold these hearings within the coming week, so that the code will be 100 per cent effective on July 17.

Without doubt the President hurried this cotton textile code into effect to halt what he fears is an unnecessary expansion of production at the expense of labor pending the adoption of the code.

Confers With Board.

Returning late yesterday from an overnight cruise on the Potomac, accompanied by Attorney General Cummings, he summoned Gen. Johnson and the Industrial Recovery Board into immediate session. Fortunately, after an all-night job, Gen. Johnson and his aids had completed the code.

After a careful reading, during which the President interspersed the word "bully" every now and then, he affixed his signature and dictated his statement.

He hopes this will be the signal for other industries to fall in line, and this is expected.

Marvin H. McIntyre, a secretary to the President, and Gen. Johnson cooperated last night to hasten the cotton textile code into effect in response to a demand by the President for prompt operation of his industrial recovery program.

President Rushing Plans.

The signing of the cotton code signalized a push by the Chief Executive to speed his domestic recovery program into operation. He has been aroused by an apparent attempt by some industries to speed up production by working employes longer hours before their industrial

Japanese Boat Reported Held By Soviet Crew

Tokyo Warship Hastening to Scene as Fishing Fleet Quarrels Grow.

Tokyo, July 9 (A.P.).—A Rengo (Japanese) News Agency dispatch from Hakodate today reporting the seizure of the Japanese fishing boat Kotohira Maru, carrying a crew of 20, by a Soviet trawler yesterday added a fresh incident to the Russo-Japanese fishing fleet quarrels in the northern seas.

The craft was reported seized off Petropaviovsk, Kamchatka. The reason for the seizure was not stated. Another Japanese fishing boat nearby reported the incident and a Japanese destroyer was said to be en route to the scene.

Another Rengo dispatch from Nemuro said the Soviet vessels which the Japanese seized in the Kuriles July 4 were towed to Nemuro by a Japanese patrol boat. The captains and other officers were taken ashore, where they submitted to a judicial examination for alleged unauthorized presence in Japanese territorial waters. They probably will be tried shortly in the Kushiro district court.

The rest of the Soviet crews, numbering 160, were detained aboard their ships. The Soviet consul at Hakodate went to Nemuro but was not allowed to see those detained.

Ocean Gale Delays Balbo's Departure

Reykjavik, Iceland, July 9 (A.P.).—Take-off of 24 Italian seaplanes for Labrador, next leg of a flight to Chicago, was further delayed today when no change appeared in the weather.

Gen. Italo Balbo, commander of the armada, and his staff attended a Catholic church and afterward took a long walk in town.

A heavy gale on the west Atlantic and in the vicinity of Cartwright, Labrador, next objective of the Italians, was reported. Gen. Balbo was advised that unfavorable conditions would continue for the next few days. An unconfirmed report was he received an emphatic order from Rome not to start while this outlook continued.

Post Tests His Plane On Flight Along Coast

New York, July 9 (A.P.).—Wiley Post, coholder of the world-circling speed record, made a brief test flight late today in the plane he plans to use on a solo flight around the globe.

Post is awaiting favorable weather reports for his projected take-off from Floyd Bennett field in the Winnie Mae, which he and Harold Gatty flew around the world in record time two years ago. Today's flight took him up along the New England Coast.

Cuban Congress Plans Parleys With Welles

Havana, Cuba, July 9 (U.P.).—Congressional collaboration, at least in an advisory capacity, in the mediation efforts of American Ambassador Sumner Welles to settle Cuba's internal political troubles was considered probable today.

It was understood that the government tomorrow will appoint a committee of representatives and senators to act as it srepresentatives in dealing with Welles. The committee would inform Congress of the progress of negotiations.

Mattern Seeks Use of Rescue Plane for Hop

Cablegram From Siberia Stresses Flier's Wish to Continue Alone.

Chicago, July 9 (A.P.).—H. B. Jameson, one of the backers of Jimmy Mattern's projected flight around the world, tonight received a second message from the grounded aviator requesting that the plane of the rescue expedition rescue now at Juneau, Alaska, be flown to him to permit him to continue his projected circuit of the world.

Jameson immediately relayed the message to the New York backers of the rescue expedition headed by William Alexander. He said undoubtedly the New York backers would give Alexander authority to fly to Anadyr, Siberia, where Mattern landed, as soon as weather permits.

Mattern, in his message received here about 8:30 p. m. (C. D. T.), said a Soviet airplane flying to aid him, would take the pilot of the rescue plane back to Nome and enable him to complete the first solo flight around the world.

A previous message from Mattern today asked that a Pan-American seaplane be sent to him.

The latest message read:

"Journal New York wires they will send Nome airplane to Anadyr to fly me home. Contact them and arrange for it to come immediately for me to fly solo to Nome. Pilot to return to Nome in Russian airplane coming to my aid and will accompany to Nome."

Jameson said he telegraphed the message to the New York Journal and was confident that Alexander's plane would get under way speedily.

Juneau, Alaska, July 9 (A.P.).—The Jimmie Mattern relief expedition, headed by William Alexander, will take off at 3 a. m. Monday for Fairbanks en route to Anadyr, Siberia, via Nome, Alexander announced here tonight.

(Associated Press.)

Boris E. Skvirsky, unofficial Soviet representative here, yesterday communicated to the backers of Jimmie Mattern, American round-the-world flyer, stranded in Siberia, an offer to send a Russian plane to Nome, Alaska, for a motor and spare parts for Mattern's ship.

The Coast Guard was standing by, awaiting the outcome of swift airplane relief flights before ordering its own cutter, the Northland, to pick up the round-the-world flier in Siberia.

Girl, 9, Discovers Mother's Suicide

Weymouth, Mass., July 9 (U.P.).—Arline Pitts, 9, went upstairs today to kiss her mother before going to church and found her body at the foot of an attic staircase.

The woman, Mrs. Mary A. Pitts, had hanged herself from a rafter in the attic, according to a medical examiner's report. The cord broke and she pitched to the foot of the stairs. Apparently she had died before she fell.

A few months ago her husband, Jeremiah Pitts, well-to-do realty owner, died. Friends said she had been left a comfortable income, but had not fully recovered from the shock of her husband's death.

Howe Predicts Adjourning of London Parley

Says Recess Will Be Taken While Subcommittees Prepare Reports.

(United Press.)

Early adjournment of the World Economic Conference until subcommittees are prepared to make preliminary reports was forecast here last night by Col. Louis McHenry Howe, chief secretary to President Roosevelt.

Explaining that the actual work to be accomplished by the conference could not at this moment be accurately foretold, Howe said:

"I think you will find in a general way that subcommittees will be appointed to consider topics already agreed upon, and after a short time the meetings of the full commission will be adjourned for some weeks until these committees are ready to make preliminary reports."

He pointed out that the agenda of the conference includes monetary and credit policies, resumption of the movement of capital, abolition of foreign exchange restrictions and the subject of international indebtedness, in addition to traffic and treaty policies.

Explains Roosevelt Stand.

President Roosevelt's recent sharp message to the economic conference, in which he declined to consider stabilization of the dollar at this time, merely followed a policy evolved by a committee of experts during the Hoover administration, Howe declared.

He recalled that a commission of experts from Germany, Belgium, Great Britain, China, France, India, Italy, Japan and the United States met last year to consider action against the depression.

The American representatives were Edmund E. Day, director of social science of the Rockefeller Foundation; John H. Williams, professor of economics at Harvard University, and Norman Davis, at present the United States' "roving ambassador."

Cites Earlier Policy.

The report of this conference, Howe declared, said:

"Each government must, of course, remain free to decide when and under what conditions it could adopt such a standard (gold standard) and we do not suggest that this can or should be done without the most careful preparation. There are a number of economic as well as financial conditions which must be fulfilled before the restoration of an international gold standard can be a practical possibility."

In another place, Howe recalled, the report said:

"The time when it will be possible for a particular country to return to the gold standard and the exchange parity, at which such a return can safely be made, will necessarily depend on the conditions in that country as well as those abroad, and these questions can only be determined by the proper authorities in each country separately."

Howe then declared that President Roosevelt used virtually identical language in his message to the World Economic Conference.

High-Tension Wire Injures Motorist

New London, Conn., July 9 (A.P.).—William G. Tyler, jr., 22, of Baltimore, is in a hospital here in a serious condition from injuries received in an automobile accident in which he narrowly escaped death from an electrical shock, State police revealed here tonight.

Tyler, who has a compound fracture of the jaw and lacerations of the face, crawled out of his automobile just before a high-tension cable, jarred loose by the collision of his automobile with a pole, fell on his car.

Police said that it was impossible to approach the automobile when they arrived at the scene.

Crowd Threatens Confessed Slayer

Mrs. Reifschneider at her request and that he had not criminally assaulted her. Calmly he described the events leading up to the murder. He was out working with a team, he said, and Mrs. Reifschneider was clearing some underbrush. About 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning he followed Mrs. Reifschnieder to a dense thicket just off the cleared portion of her 10-acre farm near Waldorf, Md. There, he said, he had intimate relations with her. Then he told her that he was going to leave the farm because people had been threatening him because of the liberties he was allowed in the Reifschneider household.

Describes Slaying.

According to Jupiter Mrs. Reifschneider said she would rather die than have to work the farm alone. Jupiter was working as farm hand on the place to pay off a $20 bill he owed the Reifschneider family. The bill was for vegetables bought from Mr. Reifschneider, who peddled the produce raised on the farm.

When Jupiter insisted that he was going to leave, he told his questioners, she pleaded with him to kill her with the ax and then kill himself. He struck her over the base of the skull and she said, "You haven't killed me yet." He then struck her again, over the left temple. Then he dragged her body farther into the woods.

Shortly afterward he washed out his blood-stained shirt and then instituted the search for the woman which resulted in the discovery of the body by Earl Hamilton, a farmer. All of the officers disbelieve Jupiter's story that the blows were inflicted at the woman's request. There are unmistakable signs of bruises on her legs and arms which show, the police say, that she must have put up a terrific struggle before she was assaulted.

State's Attorney Edelin intends to present the case against Jupiter to the November grand jury.

Allied Dye Co. Stockholders Claim Victory

Fuller Fund Reports Plan Said by Independents to Have Been Goal.

New York, July 9 (A.P.).—The stockholders committee of the Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation, headed by C. W. Nichols, which sought the replacement of a fourth of the directorate as a result of the company's difficulties with the stock exchange, made public today a letter to its members canceling a special meeting scheduled for August 10.

"The management of your company has finally agreed to make adequate reports to stockholders," the letter said. "This affords stockholders essential safeguards heretofore lacking and eliminates the imminent threat of the stock being stricken from the stock exchange list. This committee has thus achieved those essential objectives which called for immediate action.

"However, we remain of the opinion that the board of directors as now constituted is inadequate. The small independent element on the board should be augmented by the addition of new directors of standing, to the end that the company will have a board which, while giving wholehearted support to the management on operating problems, will nevertheless have the independence to protect the interests of shareholders when idiosyncrasies of management menace their welfare."

At 8 a. m. today he was at College Point, driving over alone in his big sedan. A compass was installed and then he took his plane up for a long trial flight over Long Island Sound. He circled and dipped with it, changed the pitch of the variable-pitch propellor, drove it slow and let it out to its cruising speed of 180-miles an hour.

Apparently it satisfied him. He telephoned to his wife and about 3 p. m. she arrived with a small party of friends. The plane was run onto the seaplane ramp. Col. Lindbergh shook hands with Maj. Peyton Gibson of the Glenn H. Curtiss Airport, Charles Kidder, officials of the Edo Company and a few others. He climbed in and watched experts make the final adjustment of his compass. Mrs. Lindbergh said goodbye to her friends and climbed into the navigator's seat. She was wearing khaki breeches, khaki shirt, low shoes, helmet and goggles. Col. Lindbergh wore gray trousers white shirt, helmet and goggles shoved up on his head.

Without further ado he started the motor, taxied out onto the sound for about 2,000 yards, raised the plane and was away.

Col. Lindbergh is making the trip for the Pan-American Airways. The Danish-Motorship Jelling has preceded him into the North to act as tender for the flight. He expects to meet it somewhere between St. Johns, Newfoundland, and Cartwright, Labrador.

In Greenland Col. Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh will work in conjunction with the University of Michigan-Pan-American Airways Expedition which is now there engaged in navigational, geographic and exploratory studies.

Overalled Girl, 19, Says 'Fiance' Fled

Charges Man Who Induced Her to Leave Home Deserted at Norfolk.

Norfolk, Va., July 9 (A.P.).—Deserted, she said, by a man who persuaded her to leave her home in Beardstown, Ill., on the promise of marriage, 19-year-old Sylvia Gledhill, was found by Police Officer H. J. Padden today in the Norfolk & Western Railroad yards near here. With the girl was her 15-year-old brother, Howard. Both were penniless.

Although dressed in overalls, the girl carried a pink dress in a package. She said that she, her brother, and the other man made the trip to Norfolk, a distance of some 1,200 miles, in a box car.

The man who induced her to leave home, she said, told her that he would get a job on a ship in Norfolk and that the three of them would then make a sea voyage.

Textile Code Will Ban Child Labor in Mills

Unprecedented Step Hailed by President as Real Recovery Measure.

Mr. Roosevelt's quick action last night and the desire to bring other basic industries under the act's provisions, is aimed by the administration at curbing the production which has grown to gigantic levels in recent weeks, while purchasing power is lagging far behind.

The textile agreement was the first presented by a basic industry. However, other major industries, including steel, lumber, coal, oil women's apparel and automobiles, are understood by Gen. Johnson to be fast approaching agreements which will be presented for hearing soon.

The momentous first code was signed in the presence last night of Secretaries Roper and Ickes, Lewis W. Douglas, Director of the Budget; Turner W. Battle, Assistant Secretary of Labor, and Gen. Johnson.

Forceful Steps Planned.

Concurrently with the signing of the act it became known that the administration is considering a direct means for bringing other industries under the terms of the national recovery act if they do not come forward promptly with the trade agreement.

Attorney General Cummings yesterday gave an interpretation to President Roosevelt that the mandatory provisions of the act can not become effective until a code is actually prescribed and thought is being given to setting up, perhaps, a temporary series of codes to spur industries into the agreements.

Today, Secretary Ickes, newly appointed administrator to the $3,300,000,000 public works program, expects to complete his organization and within a day or two he will announce an array of projects which are expected by the administration to provide jobs for thousands.

Meanwhile, the Navy Department estimated that 18,400 men would be put directly to work in shipyards, and many more indirectly in benefited industries, under an announced $238,000,000 shipbuilding program.

In a report yesterday to the public works administration which supplied the money for the 32-vessel, three-year building plan, the Navy said "more than 2,430,000 man-weeks of work will be created.

Considerable interest attached to the conference of the President and Mr. Cummings. There are many reports that speculative production is on without increased employment. One official saw the seeds of a possible new collapse being sown by a shortsighted industrial policy. In food lines, such as bread, where producers have announced price raises there is every prospect of stern Government action using the antitrust laws. Where these statutes do not apply the President has power to order industries to accept codes of his own making, but the belief is general that he will be slow to take coercive steps.

Many Codes Submitted.

Many codes of fair competition are pouring in on Gen. Johnson's offices, most of them small and representing only segments of the groups he wants joined together in general agreements to boost the purchasing power of their employes. These are being put aside until big enough units can be collected.

There is expectation, however, that one major industry—lumber—at least will be in before the end of the week with a completed code. A central group of the industry which met here Saturday and conferred at length with Dudley Cates, assistant to Gen. Johnson, believed it had found the way to meet the Roosevelt demand for a definite forest conservation policy in the code. Today the entire national emergency committee of the industry will meet here, with expectation of deciding on wage scales and hours of work for the many regional lumber groups.

On forest conservation it is the lumbermen's idea to pledge the industry to initiate a conference with the Department of Agriculture's forest authorities, State agencies and the forest conservation organizations, at which will be shaped a conclusive program to end present destructive practices and at the same time give the industry relief from the present tax burden.

Director of Farm Recovery Act Says "It Has Got to Work."

Business Associate of Johnson "Republican" Voting Democratic.

By Robert F. Whitney.

"It has got to work."

So, George N. Peek, administrator of the agricultural adjustment act, describes the outlook for the great farm relief measure the destiny of which he will guide.

Tall, red-faced, blunt but genial, and confident, Peek might be a model of the Middle West man.

Although there is a wide variance in their physical appearances and their mannerisms, Peek and his recovery twin, Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, are men of the same stamp, men of action and assurance.

Johnson and Peek were associated on the War Industries Board during the World War, and Peek took the industrial recovery head with him into farm implement manufacturing afterward.

Incidentally, Peek's World War service was recognized with the Distinguished Service Medal as well as the French Legion of Honor and awards of other foreign countries.

Like many of the men whom President Roosevelt has chosen to lead the recovery program, the farm administrator had a hand, or as he says it, "suggestions" in the framing of the legislation.

The national farm policy has always been of deep interest to Peek. He has been president of the American Council on Agriculture since he left the manufacturing of farm implements.

The Midwesterner's politics are described in that lexicon of the Nation's personalities, "Who's Who," as Republican.

Apparently that work is in error, for Mr. Peek says he has usually been "independent in politics."

"However," he adds, "I have supported three of the last four Democratic candidates for President. His first active part was in supporting the candidacy of Alfred E. Smith in 1928, he said.

Long, hard hours seem to characterize the workers for recovery. Sometimes the early morning hours still find Mr. Peek at his office, although usually, he says, "I leave at 6 or 7."

Wife of Secretary Ickes Refuses to Leave Politics

Chicago, July 9 (A.P.).—Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, Progressive Republican wife of a Democratic Cabinet member, today asserted she was going to continue her own political career.

Mrs. Ickes is a State representative from a suburban district and during the recent session of the Legislature has consistently voted as a Republican in all purely political squabbles.

At her beautiful home in Winnetka she was asked if rumors circulating at the capitol in Springfield to the effect that she would retire from her political activities to devote all her time at the side of her husband in Washington were true. In addition to his duties as Secretary of the Interior, Ickes yesterday was named by President Roosevelt as emergency administrator of the Federal Public Works program.

"Of course they aren't true," she replied with emphasis. "I have every intention of being a candidate for reelection next year. My heart and soul are in the work at Springfield. I enjoy every moment of it. I don't want to give it up."

Secretary Ickes returned last week to Washington after a short visit at home with his wife; "But we didn't talk politics," she hastened to add.

The mother of four children and grandmother of three at 60 years of age, Anna Wilmarth Ickes loves politics and has been a leader in reform movements in the State for years. She was an active collaborator with her husband when he helped to organize the progressive wing of the Republican party in Illinois. When he was designated a member of the Democratic Roosevelt administration's Cabinet this year, she continued as a Republican of progressive leanings.

But on all partisan questions she voted at Springfield this year with the Republican minority. There was some gossip that Democratic leaders killed her pet proposals in retaliation for her stand.

But if it were true Representative Ickes did not give it notice by comment. Her voice continued to command attention on both sides of the House when she spoke, for she is well informed on economic and political questions of her State.

Observers believe that, with her announced intention of seeking reelection, her three terms as a legislator stand a fair chance of being extended to four at least.

And, if political tides favor, Springfield, instead of Washington, will continue the principal beneficiary of her gracious presence.

Suicide Is Suspected In Cistern Drowning

Gallipolis, Ohio, July 9 (A.P.).—The body of Mrs. Ruby Ihle, 41, of Addison, near here, was found in a cistern at her home today. Coroner James T. Hanson said he was inclined toward a theory of suicide, but did not render a verdict immediately after the inquest.

The woman's husband, Frank Ihle, an automobile mechanic, left home after a disagreement with his wife, officers said they were informed by acquaintances. His whereabouts was unknown today.

Film Divorce

Hoot Gibson Asserts That He and Sally Eilers Are "Through."

SALLY EILERS.

Los Angeles, July 9 (A.P.).—Divorce of Sally Eilers, motion picture actress, and her film cowboy husband, Hoot Gibson, is planned. Gibson announced last night from his hospital bed, where he is recovering from serious injuries suffered in the crash of his airplane at the National Air Races.

His statement was made in the presence of June Gale, 21-year-old San Francisco actress, who agreed with Gibson that they were "madly in love." Miss Gale has been a daily visitor at Gibson's hospital room since July 3, when his plane cracked up during a race with Ken Maynard, another film cowboy.

Asked if they were going to marry, Gibson said:

"I don't think this is the time to talk about engagements or marriage. I still am married and it wouldn't be fair to anyone concerned to make any statement now."

Miss Eilers, second wife of the actor, left for Europe several months ago. It was rumored then they were estranged. Gibson said there was an agreement that her trip would be sort of a "trial separation." He said Miss Eilers wrote him from Europe that she felt they would be happier apart.

Dr. Wilbur Wright Found Dead in Bed

Fulton, N. Y., July 9 (A.P.).—Dr. Wilbur L. Wright, who forsook the practice of medicine to pioneer in the milk bottle cap and container industry, was found dead in bed today at the Pleasant Point Club on Lake Ontario. He was 74 years old.

Dr. Wright was born April 8, 1859, at Martin's Ferry, Ohio, and was a graduate of Georgetown Medical College at Washington, D. C. He practiced in the District of Columbia until he came to this city to begin manufacture of paper milk bottle caps. He was president of the Sealright Co., container producer, with plants in several cities of the United States and Canada.

Dr. Wright was the holder of many patents on machinery used in the company's business.

Wife of Slain Man Killed; Girl Sought

Scottsville, Ky., July 9 (A.P.).—Mrs. Mary Cosby Spugnardi, 28, died today at Holland from a bullet wound in the right side. A warrant for the arrest of Miss Lillie Mae McIntire, 23, on a charge of murder was issued.

The shooting occurred yesterday afternoon in the office of Dr. A. C. Cosby, Mrs. Spugnardi's father, where Miss McIntire was employed as a nurse. The dead woman's mother said Mrs. Spugnardi told her Miss McIntire shot her when she refused to leave the office.

Mrs. Spugnardi was acquitted of the murder of her husband, Mike Spugnardi, a wrestler, at Bowling Green, in February, 1932. Mrs. Spugnardi shot herself after her husband was found fatally shot on the street near their home but she recovered.

Record Heat Takes Lives In Northern Manchuria

London, July 9 (U.P.).—A heat wave in North Manchuria, described as the worst in the history of the weather bureau at Harbin there, was reported in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch today.

Several deaths due to the heat and several drownings by persons seeking relief in the treacherous Sungari River at Harbin, were reported duly, the dispatch said.

months, the premier said the country's financial condition was improving and that the treasury would repay half the recent British loan by the end of this month.

He reiterated his position in disarmament and other international questions and said France intends to pursue cordial conversations with Italy "from which country we have been separated by misunderstandings too long" and to "work to tighten the equally cherished bonds with the United States.

"Former Premier Herriot's trip to Washington," M. Daladier declared, "already has permitted us to make useful contacts and has given the government the most valuable information. If on one precise point differences are raised, we will remove them."

M. Lamoureux, who spoke at Saint-Pourcain sur Sioule, said the deadlock in the World Economic Conference makes a drastic effort to balance the budget imperative for defense of the stability of the franc.

For that reason, he continued, the government will introduce a special finance bill in October based partly on the effect of the dollar's fluctuations on French economy.

Spread of Jobs Pledged by 26 States' Agents

Formation of Employment Councils Proposed to Aid Recovery.

(Associated Press.)

Labor and relief officials of twenty-six States, gathered here at Federal behest, yesterday pledged the cooperation of their agencies with the new United States employment service toward spreading new jobs at top speed.

The meeting was arranged by W. Frank Persons, director of the United States Employment Service, and Harry L. Hopkins, Federal emergency relief administrator.

Plans for formation of a State employment council in each State, with county committees, also were disclosed. Each county committee will be composed of a representative of labor, a member of the local relief committee and three or four citizens. These county organizations will be under the State reemployment director.

Persons told the meeting that the interests of organized labor as well as unskilled labor would be recognized in working out plans, and that the preferences guaranteed by law would be safeguarded. Plans for promotion of reemployment also are to be worked on with representatives of the public works administration.

The meeting yesterday was arranged because Labor Department officials assert that only through such a thorough organization as the relief administrations in the various States may reemployment plans be hastened. The relief agencies in most States have organizations even in the smallest hamlets.

Persons made it clear in discussing the situation that the movement is not simply another relief measure. It is the intention, he said to confine employment on public works projects to qualified workers, these to be taken from lists submitted by local agencies designated by the employed workers, it was pointed out, who are not on relief rolls but who are in need. Qualifications rather than the need for relief, he indicated, will be the basis on which jobs will be distributed.

Roosevelt Lauds Trade Cooperation of all it arrives at a solution which has the unanimous approval of these conferring leaders on all three sides of the question at issue.

"I know of nothing further that could have been done. I can think of no greater achievement of cooperation, mutual understanding and good will.

"It would be unfair to omit a word of commendation of this great industry. It has proved itself the leader of a new thing in economics and government. That took faith and courage and patriotism of the highest order. They have their reward in the results they have achieved, and the example they have given."

Illinois Manufacturers On Way to See Johnson

The delegation included Thomas F. Hammond, president; Ray Wantz, of Rockford, Ill., vice president; James L. Donnelly, executive vice president, and Edward N. Hurley.

Scores Try Rescue As Boy, 7, Drowns

Wilmington, Del., July 9 (A.P.).—Benjamin Gatharia, jr., 7, drowned at Bowers Beach late today after falling into the water as he attempted to board a rowboat in which he and his chum, Billy Jackson, 8, intended to cross the Murder Hill River.

The screams of Billy Jackson attracted many persons and scores of young men and boys made repeated dives into the water in an attempt to find the body. Another attempt will be made tomorrow.

Hull Fights to Save Economic Parley

zerland, Holland and Poland—in Paris yesterday, where an accord was reached to remain on the gold standard, regardless, was expected to strengthen the opposition to discussion of monetary questions in London. However, Hull held to the hope he still had them outvoted by a narrow margin.

Pittman Plan Supported

As a result of advice from President Roosevelt today, the United States delegation decided to continue to support the resolution submitted by Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, for return to the gold standard, when and if each nation now off gold can do so. Previously, members of the delegation had not been certain whether the resolution conflicted with Mr. Roosevelt's desire that the dollar be based on the commodity price index.

It was explained authoritatively tonight that the commodity price and dollar are not independent of gold, as their value will be regulated by Washington by increasing or decreasing the gold content of the dollar, according to the rise and fall of prices.

If the conference continues, Secretary Hull believes the subjects which can be considered and acted on with authority include price levels, credit policy, individual external indebtedness, producers' agreements, innumberable restrictions on trade retaliations, and other trade practices and methods which he regards as "war breeding."

President Issues Orders For Enforcement of Code

Full Text of Regulations Gives Reason for Various Stipulations Governing Textile Industry; Office Employes Included in Benefits.

(Associated Press.)

Here are the orders issued last night by President Roosevelt after signing the cotton textile code and studying the report upon it by the national recovery administration, coupled with an analysis of the textile industry, and recommendations by the labor, industrial and consumers' advisory boards:

In accordance with section 3 (A), national industrial recovery act, the cotton textile code submitted by duly qualified trade associations of the cottdn textile industry on June 16, 1933, in full compliance with all pertinent provisions of that act, is hereby approved by the President subject to the following interpretations and conditions:

1. Limitations on the use of productive machinery shall not apply to production of tire yarns or fabrics for rubber tires for a period of three weeks after this date.

2. The planning committee of the industry, provided for in the code, will take up at once the question of employe purchase of homes in mill villages, especially in the South, and will submit to the administration before January 1, 1934, a plan looking toward eventual employe home-ownership.

Reason for Wage Limit.

3. Approval of the minimum wages proposed by the code is not to be regarded as approval of their economic sufficiency, but is granted in the belief that, in view of the large increase in wage payments provided by the code, any higher minima at this time might react to reduce consumption and employment, and on the understanding that if and as conditions improve the subject may be reopened with a view to increasing them.

4. That office employes be included within the benefits of the code.

5. The existing amounts by which wages in the higher-paid classes, up to workers receiving $30 per week, exceed wages in the lowest paid classes, shall be maintained.

6. While the exception of repair shop crews, engineers, electricians and watching crews from the maximum hour provisions is approved, it is on the condition that time and one-half be paid for overtime.

7. While the exception of cleaners and outside workers is approved for the present, it is on condition that the planning and supervisory committee provided by section 6 prepare and submit to the administration, by January 1, 1934, a schedule of minimum wage and of maximum hours for these classes.

Double Employment.

8. It is interpreted that the provisions for maximum hours establish a maximum of hours of labor per week for every employe, so that under no circumstances will such an employe be employed or permitted to work for one or more employers in the industry in the aggregate in excess of the prescribed number of hours in a single week.

9. It is interpreted that the provisions for a minimum wage in this code establish a guaranteed minimum rate of pay per hour of employment, regardless of whether the employe's compensation is otherwise based on a time rate or upon a piece-work performance. This is to avoid frustration of the purpose of the code by changing from hour to piece-work rules.

10. Until adoption of further provisions of this code necessary to prevent any improper speeding up of work to the disadvantage of employes (stretch-outs) and in a manner destructive to the purposes of the national industrial recovery act, it is required that any and all increases in the amount of work or production required of employes over that required on July 1, 1933, must be submitted to and approved by the agency created by Section 6 of the code, and by the administration, and if not so submitted, such increases will be regarded as a prima facie violation of the provisio for minimum wages.

Hearings for Exceptions.

11. The code will be in operation as to the whole industry but, opportunity shall be given for administrative consideration of every application of the code in particular instances to any person directly affected who has not in person or by a representative consented and agreed to the terms of the code. Any such person shall be given an opportunity for a hearing before the administrator or his representative, and for a stay of the application to him of any provision of the code, prior to incurring any liability to the enforcement of the code against him by any means provided in the national industrial recovery act, pending such hearing. At such hearing any objection to the application of the code in the specific circumstances may be presented and will be heard.

12. This approval is limited to a four months' period with the right to ask for a modification at any time and subject to a request for renewal for another four months at any time before its expiration.

13. Section 6 of the code is approved on condition that the Administration be permitted to name three members of the planning and supervisory committee of the industry. Such members shall have no vote but in all other respects shall be members of such planning and supervisory committee.

Grundy Alleges Plot in Charges Of 'Sweatshop'

Answers Criticism of His Textile Plant Before State Inquiry.

Bristol, Pa., July 9 (A.P.).—Answering criticism of his textile factory in the legislative sweatshop investigation, former United States Senator Joseph R. Grundy tonight denounced what he termed "an obvious conspiracy" of State officials "to create a sinister and false picture of industrial conditions."

Grundy also sharply rapped the investigating committee for accepting "anonymous accusations." Among the members is Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, appointed to the committee by her husband, governor of the State and political ally of Grundy.

Grundy's attack of testimony in the investigation of wage and employment conditions throughout Pennsylvania was made in a letter sent to the committee's chairman, State Senator G. Mason Owlett, of Wellsboro.

It was prompted by four letters introduced at the hearing in Doylestown on Thursday. Reputedly by employes in the Grundy plant, the letters described workers there as "slaves," and said that, if ill, "you work until you drop."

The letters "bear evidence of having been prepared" for "sensational purposes and with an ulterior motive," charged Grundy.

"There was no suggestion in them of any violation of law," he said. "I know from constant personal contact that our plant has been and is being conducted as a model factory with every convenience and consideration for the welfare of the workers, in all of whom I take a deep, personal interest."

Sirovich Foresees Soviet Adjustment

(Associated Press).

Representative Sirovich (Democrat), New York, said last night he was reliably informed an "adjustment" in the American diplomatic attitude toward Russia "is under serious consideration by the administration."

The New Yorker made the statement in connection with a declaration that he had found "very satisfactory reactions in administration, congressional and business circles" to a plan put forward by him to organize a committee to go to Russia to investigate trade possibilities. He said, however, this plan would not involve commitment of the administration to recognition.

Sirovich mentioned Speaker Rainey and Majority Leader Byrns, of Tennessee, as among those on Capitol Hill who had "tentatively approved" his suggestion. It was his information, Sirovich said, "that a more rational disposition will be shown toward that great people in their efforts to solve their tremendous political and economic problems in their own way."

Sloan Is Gratified By Code's Success

Calls on Cotton Industry to Make Provisions Effective at Once.

New York, July 9 (A.P.).—George A. Sloan, president of the Textile Institute of New York, issued the following statement from his home at Greenwich, Conn., tonight when informed that President Roosevelt had signed the code for the cotton textile industry.

"I am happy to learn the news from the White House and I am proud of the cotton industry for being the first to cooperate with the President under the industrial recovery act. I appeal to the same fine spirit of patriotism and progressive attitude within the cotton manufacturing industry which made this code possible to proceed now without delay in making its provisions effective throughout the industry.

"Besides, I very much hope the other major industries, for their own sake and for the good of the Nation, will lose no time in joining the forward march under Gen. Hugh Johnson to recovery."

Mother Builds Memorial

Special to The Washington Post.

Romney, W. Va., July 9.—The story of how a mother fashioned a memorial to her aviator son and took the quartz from West Virginia to erect a monument in Chenango Valley Cemetery, Binghamton, N. Y., was revealed here today.

The mother is Mrs. William W. Keister, of Romney. She decided that Memorial Day, 1933, would see the monument erected, as the day before, May 29, was the first anniversary of the death of her son, Aubrey Keister, aged 29. With a passenger, he lost his life May 29, 1932, on Floyd Bennett Field, N. Y., when the plane he was piloting crashed and burned.

Mrs. Keister traveled to Binghamton by automobile from her home here, a distance of 340 miles, with her younger son, Herbert, aged 19. With them they brought hundreds of pieces of quartz, from which the memorial was constructed.

"It was," the mother said, "dug from the mountains 40 miles from Romney. Aubrey liked this quartz. His father is a stone mason and he built a monument in Romney with this kind of quartz."

She said her husband intended to go with her, but he was taken ill, so she drove to Binkhampton and with the help of her son built this monument in the cemetery, concrete foundation and all. It is 24 inches long, 16 inches wide and 5 feet high. A simple marble marker was placed, bearing the words, "Aubrey M. Keister, 1903-1932."

Mrs. Keister has a family of eleven, and Aubrey's death was the first.

Aubrey went to Binkhampton from Romney, where he obtained employment. He became engaged to Miss Mildred Biebach who, however, died the previous August in a sanitorium at Mount McGregor, N. Y. Her body was taken to Binghampton in an airplane. Aubrey's last request before he died was to be buried by her side, which request was carried out.

Aubrey had obtained a private pilot's license a month before he died.

Lisbon Revolt Fear Gains as 2 Gain Liberty

London, July 9 (A.P.).—A Reuters (British) Agency dispatch from Lisbon attributes the disquieting feeling in Portuguese government circles to the escape from prison of two officers described as the leaders of a dangerous conspiracy against the administration.

(A communique Saturday referred to antigovernment activities and said that "measures are being taken to dissipate the revolutionary atmosphere which enemies of the government have been displaying lately.")

The officers, Capt. Cruz and Lieut. Pio, escaped by a ruse Friday from Oporto prison, where they were sent a fortnight ago to serve sentences of four years.

A man dressed as an officer called at the prison and presented a document ordering the appearance of the two prisoners at Lisbon. The authenticity of the document appears not to have been questioned. The two prisoners were placed in charge of the visiting officer and left the prison. The trio has not been seen since.

Dissatisfaction with the government is said to have been caused by dictatorial actions of Premier Salazar and there are indications that the government fears a revolutionary movement. A strict censorship was imposed on all telegrams abroad. Outwardly conditions are calm and there are no troops in the city.

Wide Search Made For Student Nurse

Gloucester, Mass., July 9 (U.P.).—Police today organized a widespread search for Miss Helen C. Nichols, 21, blonde student nurse at Addison Gilbert Hospital, who disappeared Friday afternoon. She was to have gone to the theater Saturday night with a Gloucester young man who was questioned today by City Marshal Daniel Casey, and exonerated.

Miss Nichols, whose home is at Smithtown Branch, Long Island, N. Y., was last seen at the Nurses' Home a half hour before she was to have gone on duty. She seemed in high spirits, according to a nurse who talked with her. Two of her brothers came from New York today to aid in the search.

Mrs. Martha J. Avard, superintendent of the hospital, described the young woman as "a fine student who offered no problems in discipline."

Mosquitos Called Mattern's Problem

Atlantic City, N. J., July 9 (A.P.).—A piece of mosquito netting probably will be found responsible for saving the life of Jimmy Mattern, round-the-world flier, forced down in Siberia, Jack Clark, Mattern's Eastern representative, said today.

In planning the flight, Clark said, the possibility of a forced landing in lonely Siberia was studied and mosquitos were found to be the greatest hazard.

Contrary to other reports, Clark said Mattern did not carry firearms, as he could not secure permits from foreign governments. He said he carried fishing tackle, salt, a hunting knife and especially for a Siberian crack-up, mosquito netting.

"We had learned that in Siberia clouds of huge mosquitos made life miserable for every living thing. They breed as soon as the snow melts," Clark said. "Alaskan aviators informed us that they always carried such netting, mittens and heavy clothing as a guard against mosquitos on forced landings; that sometimes mosquitos formed a layer a quarter inch thick all over their clothing in the territory where Mattern was forced down."

Youth Is Returned For Slaying Quiz

Springfield, Ohio., July 9 (A.P.).—Theodore A. Holmes, 20, Antioch College student, was brought back here tonight for questioning in the slaying of Mrs. Nora Coffey, 24 of Springfield.

Arrested at Winsted, Conn., Holmes was returned by Sheriff George W. Benham of Clark County and Robert G. Donnelly, special investigator for the Clark County prosecutor, but Green County authorities pondered possibility of filing charges against Holmes there.

Sheriff Benham said that en route to Springfield the youth admitted he shot Mrs. Coffey as they struggled for possession of a revolver in an automobile parked along the road near Goes station, Green County, May 11.

Artist and Model Differ on Beauty

Barclay Favors Composite of Best Features of Movie Queens.

Los Angeles, July 9 (A.P.).—Helen Marie Haskin, screen actress and motor car and cigarette ad girl, and Col. McClelland Barclay, noted artist and illustrator, who have just been divorced here, had their own ideas about beautiful women.

"A red headed woman can not depend upon her hair alone for charm," said Miss Haskin, former New York socialite, a while before the family rift.

Barclay, who had been married once before, declared that for a woman to be really beautiful, she should have Kay Francis' gait, Marlene Dietrich's legs, Wynee Gibson's knees, Marion Hopkins' chest and shoulders, Carole Lombard's hips, Sylvia Sidney's hands, Mae West's teeth, Helen Twelvetrees' lips and Elissa Landi's carriage.

$2,404,238 Loaned Farm Cooperatives

(Associated Press.)

Gov. Henry Morgenthau, jr., of the Farm Credit Administration announced yesterday that loans of $2,404,238 for farm cooperatives were authorized during June.

Repayments on loans made by the administration and the Farm Board, which it absorbed on May 27, totaled $2,411,647. The total outstanding loans to cooperatives on June 30 totaled $181,158,833.

The largest loan during June—$1,525,944—was made to the Staple Cotton Cooperative Association of Greenwood, Miss. With it the association made settlements with its members on their 1930-31 seasonal pool cotton which the Credit Administration shortly will turn over to Secretary Wallace.

Wallace will use the cotton in granting options to growers, together with cash payments for agreement to reduce their growing crop from 25 to 50 per cent in the acreage reduction campaign now under way.

"Toy" Cyclone Uproots Tree, Crushing Auto

Driver Escapes With Life as Wind Whips Out of Great Falls Gorge.

A Washington man escaped by a scant foot with his life yesterday as a "toy" cyclone whipped viciously out of the deep Potomac gorge at Great Falls, Va., uprooting a giant oak, which fell, crushing his brand-new sedan.

The wind swept out of the gorge at the height of the rainstorm yesterday, duplicating similar phenomena along the Potomac Valley this summer.

Samuel W. Boyd, 38, Capital attorney, was attempting to get his car through the storm to provide shelter for his wife and two children, who were waiting, rainbound, in the merry-go-round at the Great Falls amusement park.

Boyd brought his car to a halt to reconnoiter the rough ground ahead. He was in the center of the amusement park and just abreast of the towering tree.

Suddenly the giant oak came crashing down, rendering the sedan a twisted mass of shining new metal. Only the corner of the top was uncrushed. Boyd received only a few cuts when he beat the rear window open with his hands to get out.

"If I had halted a foot further to the right or left I would have been killed," he said last night at his home, 3927 Livingston street northwest.

The oak clipped off several smaller trees like so many matches. The roots are 18 to 20 feet across and the cavity left by the giant tree looked like a shell hole in No Man's Land.

The baby cyclone seemed to spend itself after uprooting the tree, no other damage being observed.

Hitler Asserts Work for Idle Is His Big Aim

Lauds Vatican Political Ban for Priests; Clerics in Jail to Be Freed.

Dortmund, Germany, July 9 (A.P.).—Adolf Hitler, reviewing the past five months' achievements since his elevation to the chancellorship, said today he had not believed it possible such tremendous changes could be wrought in such a short time.

The next task, he announced in a speech in this west German city, is the training of citizens for the state. The chancellor asserted his whole endeavor would be to fight unemployment which, since his advent to power, already has been reduced by 2,000,000 persons.

"If we make a false step, we will start over again the next day," he said. "We will restore the people's consumption capacity, thereby imbuing them with fresh courage to face life."

Referring to the new concordat between the Reich and the Holy See, signed yesterday in Rome, the chancellor said: "We are happy that the new concordat bars priests forever from interfering with politics."

In return for the pledge that the German Catholic Church would abandon political activity, the chancellor ordered release of Catholic priests and leaders under arrest for political reasons.

Herr Hitler said the political party system in Germany never would be resurrected and that the Nazi regime would endure forever.

A quarter of a million persons heard the speech and cheered the government chief tumultously. About 70,000 Nazi storm troops were in the audience.

"Romantic" Symphony Hailed on Pacific Coast

Hillsborough, Calif., July 9 (A.P.). The "Romantic" symphony of Dr. Howard Hanson, director of the Eastman School of Music at Rochester, N. Y., was given its first West Coast performance today at the Woodland Theater with the composer conducting.

The composition, in three movements, first played in Boston in 1930, was enthusiastically received.

Californian Held In Killing of Man

Milwaukee, Wis., July 9 (A.P.).—Less than two hours after Robert Shinners, 21-year-old son of Sheriff Joseph Shinners, was shot to death in a holdup attempt early today, Fred Garcia, of Riverside, Calif., was arrested and, police said, confessed the slaying.

County authorities said a first degree murder warrant would be issued tomorrow.

Garcia, a former convict, was arrested while sleeping on a park bench, to which he fled after robbing a lunchroom immediately following the shooting of Shinners in the warehouse and garage of which he was night manager, officers said. He said he fired at young Shinners when he resisted his attempts to rob the garage.

Scattered Rain Relieves Dry Canadian Prairies

Winnipeg, July 9 (A.P.).—Occasional thundershowers and hailstorms broke the oppressiveness of week-end mugginess on the Canadian prairies today and brought a measure of relief to parched crops throughout the three western provinces. Temperatures were uniformly high, but many sections reported cloudy skies broke the force of the sun's heat.

Except in southern Saskatchewan, where the grasshopper plague assumed menacing proportions again, and in southern Alberta, where rain is badly needed, crops were reported in fair condition, with few districts experiencing important damage.

Flame of Coke Ovens Heralds Steel Recovery

Thousands of "Beehives" to Glow as Mills' Demand for Fuel Grows.

Connellsville, Pa., July 9 (A.P.).—Thousands of glowing fires are to gleam again on Western Pennsylvania hillsides, reflections of industry's gradual emergence from the darkness of depression.

Row on row of flames are due to spring up from row on row of "Beehive" coke ovens, suppliers of fuel to his majesty—steel.

For as steel production hovers around the 50 per cent of capacity mark the demand for coke rises and the "beehives" get their opportunity to share in the industry's returns.

Many of the ovens have been dark for two or three years because the more modern ovens, which save by-products in the process of making coke, were able to meet steel's greatly decreased needs for fuel.

The H. C. Frick Coke Co., one of the big producers of this type of fuel, has begun the overhauling of its standard plant at Mount Pleasant, Pa., the largest beehive coke plant in the United States. With its 999 ovens, the plant will employ 500 men. It has been idle for a year.

Coal known as Connellsville bituminous—mined in Westmoreland and other western Pennsylvania counties—has long been hailed as one of the best coaking coals.

For this reason, the coke business developed rapidly in the Connellsville area, and thousands of beehive ovens were built, getting their name from their hemispherical roof and conical chimney.

During boom times the fires of mile after mile of the ovens, built in rising rows on hillsides, gleam through the night—signals that all is well with steel.

Man 'Born' at Age of 72

North Carolinian Sees Auto, Motion Picture and Negroes for First Time and Allows He'll Move to Town and Buy a Car.

Murphy, N. C., July 9 (A.P.).—Edward Valentine Gladstone lived 72 years on his mountain farm within thirteen miles of Murphy and never saw a town, an automobile, or a movie until last Friday.

Venture from his rural retreat came about by chance, and he was somewhat reluctant to go, but now he is talking about buying an automobile and moving to town so he can see the film dramas when he pleases.

Fate decreed that Gladstone go to a mountain mill to have some corn ground just as J. H. Voyles and D. A. Silvey, of Murphy, drove up in their automobile.

"I'd kinda like to see that town before I die," the farmer said wistfully.

The city-dwellers invited him to return with them for a visit and he finally agreed after much persuasion. But they had a hard time getting him into the automobile. He said he was afraid it would jump down the mountainside.

Once in town, Farmer Gladstone took to urban ways and liked them. The town's leading citizens outdid themselves to entertain him. Gladstone confided to Chief of Police Fred Johnson that he had never seen a Negro, but would like to, so Johnson took him to the Negro quarter.

He was guest of honor at a hotel dinner that night and then his hosts drove him home to give a full report to Willie May, his 40-year-old daughter, who says she has never been more than three miles from the farm.

Now he has concluded his plan of living has been wrong and he is going to change things.

"Maybe I've been making a mistake," he said. "A town is pretty good. Maybe I better get one of these autos and move in."

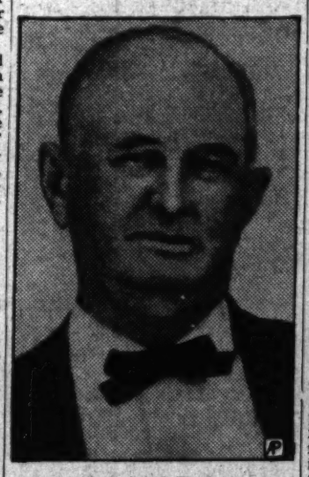
Jim Ferguson Is in Town; Patronage? Ah, No, He Says

Former Governor Merely Will Air Economic Status of Texas.



(Associated Press.)

James (Governor Jim) Ferguson, Texas, came to Washington yesterday to spend a busy week interviewing administration officials and if possible to see President Roosevelt to assure him that Texas is with him in everything he is seeking to do.

This was the outline of his visit given to newspapermen yesterday by the former Texas governor, who was impeached and then helped twice to elect his wife to the governor's chair. His title as "Governer Jim" is honorary, and he is here as "Ma" Ferguson's representative.

But with all his conferences, he emphasized he was not here to discuss patronage and was "not looking for jobs for anyone." However, he said, he would discuss the political situation during a conference he hoped to arrange with Postmaster General Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee.

Governor Jim said he was going to talk about economic conditions in Texas to various of the administration leaders. To newspapermen he made it clear that he disagreed strongly with an editorial he had clipped from a newspaper, saying that prosperity apparently was returning.

"Prosperity is not here and nobody should be deceived into thinking it is," he said.

The Texan had an instance of his own to illustrate his contention that "prosperity can come only by providing for raises in prices at the source on farm and ranch products."

"While we are talking about fixing codes and eliminating cut-throat competition," he said, "I want to mention that just last week I sold some 3-year-old beef steers I have fed for five months at a cost of 10 cents each per day. They went to market weighing 1,185 pounds, fine and fat, and I received the fabulous price of 2½ cents per pound.

"I was in a hotel yestreday and they charged me $1.25 for a beef steak weighing one-third of a pound. I want to see the administration apply the code in due form to prevent this gross inequality of prices which have produced this depression.

"It would be the greatest disappointment any people experienced if any qualification or modification of the industrial recovery act were now allowed to be put in motion."

British Jews Launch New Anti-Reich Drive

London, July 9 (U.P.).—British Jews today announced a new campaign aimed at the complete boycott in England of German goods by Jewish traders and buyers of goods throughout this country.

A boycott certificate, for which the Jews said they already had over 4,700 applications, will be exhibited by tradesmen who agree not to sell German goods. The move is in retaliation against the Nazi anti-Jewish campaign in Germany, headed by Chancellor Adolf Hitler.

Test of Religion Lies in Deeds, Preacher Says

Dr. Etz Tells Union Service Religion "Must" Make Difference in Life.

"To many today God is only a vague uncertainty," stated Dr. Roger F. Etz, of Boston, Mass., general superintendent of Universalist churches, preaching yesterday at a union service at Universalist National Memorial Church. The service was participated in by All Souls Unitarian Church, Mount Pleasant Congregational Church and Universalist National Memorial Church and was third of the union summer services.

Taking as his theme a quotation from Carlyle, Dr. Etz said in part:

"'The thing a man does practically believe, the thing a man does practically lay to heart and honor for certain, concerning his vital relations to this mysterious universe, that is in all cases the primary thing for him and creatively determines all the rest. That is his religion'."

"This conception of religion as expressed by Carlyle is more and more coming to be accepted; not creed, but deed, is the real test of religion.

"Religion must make a difference in life or it is of no value.

God Great Fact in Life.

"For illustration, take the fundamental doctrine of the church, God. What difference does our thought of God make in our lives? If we believe that God is that power outside ourselves which makes for righteousness, it must make a difference in our daily lives.

"We have recognized the fact that there are fundamental laws in the natural and physical world, but we must also recognize the fact that there are laws of the moral and spiritual world which are just as sure and certain as those of the physical world.

"God is the great fact in life. He is the great benevolent constructive force in life. Through Him and the transfiguration of His life through human personality comes strength and power for the individual and social health for the community.

Faith Banishes Worry.

"Faith in God as a reality helps in building a sound body. Faith in God as a reality banishes worry by building a solid foundation in life. Faith in God as a reality makes us conscious of His outreaching to men, inspiring them to live the divine life in the everyday world.

"Religion does make a difference. It creatively determines the rest of life."

Dr. F. W. Perkins, minister of the Universalist Church, who has been in Maine for two weeks on his vacation, will return this week for the union service he will conduct next Sunday. This will complete the series in Universalist National Memorial Church. On July 20 the services will start in the Unitarian Church and continue to August 13, when the union services will continue at the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

Detective Dies

Detective Sergt. Harry K. Wilson, who died last night in George Washington Hospital after a lengthy illness.

Sergt. Wilson, Crime Squad Chief, Is Dead

Veteran Member of Force Won Fame for Solving Major Crimes.

Detective Sergt. Harry K. Wilson, chief of the police headquarters homicide squad, died last night in George Washington University Hospital following a long illness.

Sergt. Wilson was a veteran member of the Police Department. He served in various precincts throughout the city and received many commendations for the solution of major crimes.

Appointed to the force in 1903, Sergt. Wilson was promoted four years later to precinct detective. He was made a detective sergeant at headquarters after three years and remained there the greater portion of his 33 years service.

On January 5 of last year Sergt. Wilson was appointed chief of the homicide squad. He succeeded Detective Sergt. James H. Springmann, who died last January.

His death was the result of complications following an operation some weeks ago.

Since the illness of Sergt. Wilson, his place has been taken by Detective Sergt. George Darnell. It is believed he will likely fill the vacancy.

Sergt. Wilson is survived by his wife and an 18-year-old daughter. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Firemen Push Parade Plans For Labor Day

Each Company in Nearby Counties Will Be Asked to Aid Preparation.

Going into the second week of preparation for the eleventh annual firemen's Labor Day parade, several meetings of interest will be held within the next few days, all of them bearing directly on the success of the event.

Tonight at 8 o'clock members of the executive committee of the Ladies Auxiliary of the District Fire Department will meet at the home of Mrs. Logan Woolward.

Wednesday evening the advisory board of the Prince Georges County Volunteer Firemen's Association will discuss the coming September pageant, in which firemen in counties near Washington play such an important part.

Call on Each Company.

Each company in the county will be asked to supply members to serve on committees now at work on plans for the parade. Sergt. A. J. Bargagni, founder of the parade, is enthusiastically backing the idea of having his principal chairmen and committees made up of firemen and volunteer firemen.

Following organization in Maryland of volunteer parade workers, Sergt. Bargagni and members of the National Firemen's Association plan similar action in Virginia.

During the last ten years, Maryland and Virginia volunteer firemen have greatly assisted Sergt. Bargagni in his parade plans. Many of the companies have entered floats in the colorful parade, and have carried off prizes. Likewise, equipment entered by some of the departments has been among the most interesting pieces on exhibit here.

Department Approves Plan.

With members from these companies given an opportunity to actually take part in the parade plans, the best representation in the history of the event is looked for.

At a meeting last week, Sergt. Bargagni, Noble Rushe, vice president of the National Firemen's Association, and George Finger, organizer, decided to have firemen head the many committees this year. This has met with approval in the District Fire Department, and many of the best-known and outstanding fire fighters in the National Capital have volunteered for work.

Along with other news of the progress of the parade, The Post will publish pictures of firemen who are willingly giving their services to making the September celebration the biggest in its history.

Rockefeller, at 94, Says Life Of Simplicity Is Best for Him

Tarrytown, N. Y., July 9 (A.P.).—John D. Rockefeller, sr., in high spirits and robust health, attended services today at the Pocantico Hills Union Chapel and responded cheerfully to scores of neighbors who congratulated him upon his ninety-fourth birthday, which he observed yesterday.

Word that Mr. Rockefeller would appear spread rapidly and the Rev. Lesier Brent spoke to the largest congregation in the history of his pastorage.

Mr. Rockefeller stopped to pose at length for photographers.

"Please, Mr. Rockefeller," they asked.

"Oh, I've heard that before—go ahead and take as many as you like," replied Mr. Rockefeller.

"Now, Mr. Rockefeller, will you smile for the next snap?" he was asked.

"Smile—don't say that—just snap your picture. Remember, I'm an old man and if I smiled people would think I were pretending. I can't smile," responded Mr. Rockefeller.

Crowd Laughs at Wit.

The crowd laughed at his remarks, and then he smiled.

"I hope they got it," he said.

Up to this point John D. Rockefeller, jr., was with his father. Then he left him to attend a meeting of the vestry.

"How do you feel, Mr. Rockefeller?" the aged capitalist was asked.

"Never better," he replied. "I lead a simple life, and none simpler than yesterday. I did not play golf. I did not go outside of the estate. Had a quiet family party and that was all."

"How is your golf?"

"It's good, but not as good as it used to be. I can still hit a straight ball, but as for distance I can't make it."

Especially Enjoys Riding.

"You know my pleasure is riding and golfing. I've traveled many miles in my automobile in a year."

Then calling to a member of his household, he asked, "How many?" and was told, "More than 20,000."

"Just another picture?" some asked.

"All right," he replied, "but you must listen to this story:

"Once upon a time there was a community that received unusual good fortune. So the people of the community met and passed a resolution to take up a collection. The next day they met again and decided that the collection should be for the poor, and meeting the third day they decided they were the poor."

Discussing his health, Mr. Rockefeller said:

"I've reached the summertime of life. I want to be where there is summertime all the time. That's why I spend so much time in Florida—more in Lakewood and so little in Pocantico."

Mr. Rockefeller shook hands with numerous children, but he did not pass out dimes or nickels, as often is his habit.

Storm Destroys Mexican Villages

50 Grass Hamlets Reported Destroyed and Three Persons Killed.

Mexico City, July 9 (A.P.).—First delayed storm reports from Ciudad Victoria, Tamaulipas State, said tonight one woman and two children were reported killed in outlying villages during Thursday night's storm.

Victoria itself escaped without casualties and the information concerning the deaths was not verified, the message said. Victoria suffered heavy property damage. It was estimated that 30 to 50 grass villages east and north of Victoria were blown away, but without casualties. Torrential rains, however, have added a menace to the hurricane-torn zone.

Floods are general through Tamaulipas and Nuevo Leon. Elsewhere in Mexico, rivers approached flood stages after downpours following the hurricane, which blew itself out into the Pacific Ocean today.

Beer Legalizing Drive Is Pushed In Alexandria

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The question of the legalizing 3.2 beer in Alexandria is still engaging the attention of the merchants, and, although the city council declined to admit that it might be placed on sale in opposition to the dry law of Virginia and the pronouncement of Gov. John Garland Pollard, its sale and "semilegal" respectability in Richmond and Henrico County has given new impetus to the matter.

It has been reported that no efforts would be made in Richmond to arrest duly licensed merchants handling the brew, and that any cases brought before the police officials of Richmond will be continued until after the special session of the Legislature called for August 17.

The recent cases of three Alexandria merchants who were arrested for illegal possession of 3.2 beer, fined in the police court, and then freed by a jury in the corporation court, have apparently convinced local merchants that no action against those dealing in beer is to be expected, and the action of the governor in calling a special session of the legislature, which is expected to legalize beer sales, has strengthened this conviction.

It is now reported that the Alexandria merchants will again go before the city council with a request for legalization of beer selling. The council was advised by its attorney that such authority could not be legally given, but it is thought possible that the action of the Richmond and Henrico authorities may change this attitude, especially since several members of the council are known to be in favor of such action, if considered legal.

Freak Hailstorm Blockades Traffic

Golfers Pelted by Stones 2 Inches in Diameter at New London.

New London, Conn., July 9 (U.P.).—A freak storm tonight pelted this section with hailstones ranging from the size of marbles to two inches in diameter.

The hailstones whitened fields and filled valleys on the heavily traveled Boston Post road to a depth of six inches. Traffic was at a standstill.

The storm caught several hundred spectators on the Shenecossett golf course where the first round of the annual Shenecossett tournament was being played. They covered their heads with newspapers and coats to prevent injury.

Dr. France Begins Farmyard Talks

Port Deposit, Md., July 9 (A.P.).—Dr. Joseph Irwin France, former United States senator from Maryland, today inaugurated his Sunday talks in the yard of his farm home near here.

Speaking in what he termed "a sort of sausage-grinder style—kind of skipping here and there," Dr. France outlined the moral law, compared it with world economics, and spoke briefly of events leading up to the discovery of America, the Declaration of Independence and his experiences in national affairs.

The outline is a basis for a series of talks the Maryland physician-statesman-gentleman farmer proposes to be given this summer in the sylvan amphitheater of his lawn.

Holdup Victim Is Shot; Posse Seizes Suspect

Monticello, Ind., July 9 (A.P.).—A young man giving his name as Carl Brill, 28, of Toledo, Ohio, was held in jail here today after his capture by a posse which formed when John Mylnski, 31, was wounded during the holdup of his filling station at Reynolds, Ind., near here by two men.

Officers said Mrs. Ralph Weackman, mother-in-law of Mylnski, identified Brill as the driver of the holdup men's automobile, who talked to her during the robbery.

Father Kills Girl, 19, And Commits Suicide

Huntington, Ind., July 9 (A.P.).—Erwin Elick, 41, farmer of near Markle, Ind., shot and killed his daughter, Edith, 19, early today and then committed suicide. Relatives said the slaying climaxed a family quarrel.

The girl had come home yesterday to be with her parents on her birthday. Elick's widow said he became mentally deranged about a year ago, and had had frequent quarrels with his daughter.

Woman Is Shot On Veranda of Virginia Home

Former Federal Employe Here Was Bride July 4; Husband Held.

Shenandoah, Va., July 9 (A. P.).—Mrs. Olive Breedon Dean Bain, about 30, was found on the porch of her cottage near here early this morning with a bullet wound through her body.

She was carried to a Harrisonburg hospital where the bullet was removed.

Police said they had been unable to learn the identity of her assailant. They said they learned that the shooting occurred about 2:15 this morning on the back porch of the cottage.

Sheriff E. L. Lucas and Commonwealth's Attorney Lynn Walton began an investigation.

They said they were holding Eugene Bain, husband of the wounded woman, for questioning in connection with the shooting.

Laura Belle Price, Mrs. Bain's housekeeper, who exonerated the woman's husband, said Mrs. Bain was in a party of four persons that returned from Covington at 2 o'clock. She told police that the shooting occurred about 15 minutes later when Mrs. Bain went out on the back porch.

Authorities said they had learned that Mrs. Bain, who worked in a Government office in Washington, was married to Bain on July 4. Bain worked in a paper mill at Covington.

They went last night to the cottage near Shenandoah, owned by Mrs. Bain and occupied by her mother, Mrs. Breeden.

President Taps Key to Launch Bridge Project

Work Commences on Span Linking Oakland With San Francisco.

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt late yesterday tapped a gold-plated telegraph key in the White House, starting construction on the mammoth San Francisco-Oakland Bay bridge, which he described as "symbolizing the upturn that has come in our industrial life."

Sitting behind his desk in the Executive Mansion, the President without ceremony directed the electric spark across the Nation, starting work on the bridge to span Oakland Bay.

Talking picture machines recorded the event and Mr. Roosevelt spoke these words:

"I deem it a real honor to initiate the construction of the greatest bridge ever built and the largest construction job undertaken in the United States this year, the San Francisco-Oakland Bay bridge.

$70,000,000 Cost.

"Financed jointly by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the State of California at a cost estimated at $70,000,000, this great span will serve countless millions during the years to come.

"Even now it is serving a useful purpose as it brings additional employment to thousands of men who are getting the materials ready and to 6,000 or 7,000 men who will work directly on the job of construction.

"This huge undertaking, which is to be followed by many others through the medium of the public works program, symbolizes the upturn that has come in our industrial life.

Thousands at Ceremony.

San Francisco, July 9 (A.P.).—While thousands of Californians gathered today at key points of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay bridge project, President Roosevelt pressed a button in Washington that officially launched work on the $70,000,000 undertaking.

The button made an electrical contact, setting off three dynamite blasts: one on Yerba Buena Island, midway in the bay, one on Ricon Hill, San Francisco, and one at the foot of Fourteenth street, Oakland.

Former President Herbert Hoover participated in ground-breaking ceremonies on the island, at which Gov. James Rolph, Jr., gave an address. Oakland and San Francisco officials conducted simultaneous ceremonies on their respective sides of the bay.

$50,000,000 Increase Noted In Tax Revenue

While Federal tax collections for the Nation during the fiscal year ended June 30, were more than $50,000,000 greater than 1932 receipts, Maryland and the District of Columbia contributed $378,428.2 less to the national treasury, the Bureau of Internal Revenue revealed today.

The Maryland-District contribution in income and miscellaneous taxes was $31,562,242.98. Aided principally by a $30,000,000 profit from the new beer taxes, total U. S. revenues jumped $56,494,386.74 over last year's to a total of $1,816,223,408.78.

Corporation and individual income taxes were off considerably from those of the previous year, but miscellaneous internal revenue collections, which included the new levies in the billion dollar tax bill and beer taxes for April, May and June, were up $369,000,000 to a total of $869,440,211.

Corporation income taxes decreased from $629,566,115 in 1932 to $395,302,432 in 1933 and the individual income taxes dropped from $427,190,581 in 1932 to $351,480,764 in 1933. Thus total income taxes for the last year stood at $746,783,196, as compared with $1,756,697 the previous year.

New York, as usual, led the way with total taxes paid the Government. The Empire State submitted $375,242,442 for the year, as compared with $394,989,203 the previous year, but North Carolina, with her huge tobacco levies, ranked first in miscellaneous taxes, turning in $200,714,211.

Pennsylvania paid $114,245,900 total taxes, as compared with $109,393,218 the previous year; California, $94,624,068, as compared with $77,362,180; Illinois, $106,004,061, against $106,676,227 and Ohio, $89,464,343, as compared with $51,914,200.

Kentucky nearly doubled her taxes for the year due to the miscellaneous taxes of $46,854,576 which brought the total for the year to $51,026,548, as compared with $26,273,812 in 1932. The increase resulted from the manufacture of tobacco and tobacco products in the State.

Shriner Hosts Go toChurch on Eve of Festivity

Order's Hospitals for Crippled Children Lauded; $17,000,000 Spent.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 9 (A. P.).—Welcomed by a flag-decked city and boardwalk, the Shriners opened their national convention today with religious services forming the prelude for the gathering's week of festivities and merry-making.

Red-fezzed bodies of uniformed nobles and bands attended special Shrine services of the various local denominational churches, and heard Shriners' hospitals for crippled children lauded as humanitarian enterprises.

Trustees of these hospitals have been at work here for the past week on the administration and funds of the order's crippled children institutions, which now number fifteen. Figures released by the trustees announce that 35,000 deformed and crippled children have been cared for in the hospitals, which have cost the Shriners $4,000,000 for buildings, and $13,000,000 for maintenance.

Former Mayor W. Freeland Kendrick, of Philadelphia, shared in the day's tribute to the hospital work, for, as imperial potentate of the order, he sponsored the Shriner's hospital idea at the 1920 national convention, in Portland, Oreg.

Shriners continued to pour into this resort all day from all quarters of North America. The proportions of the influx led officials to believe that their preconvention estimates of an attendance of 50,000 would be realized. Lured by perfect weather, a large crowd of week-enders filled the boardwalk, and their numbers, augmented by the visiting Shriners, gave this resort one of the largest throngs it has entertained in several years.

Traces Are Found Of 'Lost' Cathedral

Amalfi, Italy (A.P.).—Traces of the legendary "lost" cathedral of the tenth century, Amalfi Republic, have been found after centuries. The temple was believed to have been destroyed.

Remains of the cathedral were discovered when Commander Gino Chierici, superintendent of medieval and modern art, brought historical facts and legendary tales to support a theory that the temple might be concealed at the site of the present Church of the Crucifix.

Officials and students of archeology were surprised when a few light taps of Commander Chierici's pick on the outer walls of the Church of the Crucifix revealed a series of double Gothic arches supported on slender columns. Masonry uncovered by the archeologist showed that walls and corridors of the old cathedral must have been filled in during some remote construction.

Virginia Town Defies Law and Sells 3.2 Beer

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 9.—They were selling beer openly here tonight despite Virginia's dry law, and police, acting on word from higher-ups were not making any arrests.

One restaurant this afternoon emblazoned across its plate-glass front in letters a foot and a half high "Beer 3.2 per cent" and other places as were able to obtain a supply were selling it across the counter. Several cafe owners and confectionery operators said they had ordered a supply to be put on sale when it reaches here tomorrow.

Mayor F. W. Tyman tonight declared that the sellers "had not been given any encouragement, but that police were passing it (the sale of beer) up temporarily."

Police indicated that their action during the rest of this week would be guided by a conference among city authorities tomorrow.

Police Justice Brooks was reluctant to "pre-judge" his action, but declared that he would not "continue" any case until after the special session of the Virginia Assembly in August, as Richmond courts have begun to do.

Judge A. D. Dabney of the Charlottesville Corporation Court could not be reached tonight. However, on Friday night he offered before executives of Virginia municipalities gathered for the Institute of Public Affairs the draft of a bill to be presented the Virginia Legislature which called for local option in the sale of beer. His statements are credited with bringing action among merchants this week-end.

"For thirty years I have contended that the solution of the liquor question lay in the sale of light wines and beers," Judge Dabney told the assembled mayors and city managers from throughout Virginia. "The history of some places now is that people who used to drink whiskey are now drinking beer and what used to be cocktail parties are now beer parties."

Cliff Dwelling in Colorado Was Inhabited 200 Years

"Apartment" Believed to Have Been Occupied in Eleventh Century.

Though the independent United States is 157 years old, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes has revealed that this Nation still has not reached the age of one of its Indian settlements, for national park lands contain the dwellings of a people who occupied a single site for about two centuries.

It has been definitey established by tree-ring chronology that Cliff Palace, the ruins of one of the prehistoric cliff dwellings in Mesa Verde National Park, Colo., was occupied for 199 years.

The interest of archeologists is focusing in a civilization developed in our own Southwest, not far inferior to that of the Indians that existed in Peru, Central America and southern Mexico. Among the most notable traces of their existence are the cliff dwellings on the tableland in southwestern Colorado called Mesa Verde by the early Spaniards. To preserve these valuable relics, which far surpass any findings of the same sort in the United States, Congress set aside the Mesa Verde National Park.

Like Apartment House.

Cliff Palace was so named by its discoverers, Richard and Alfred Wetherill, to whom it presented an astonishing picture upon first sight. It is an amazing spectacle to any one who for the first time approaches as the Wetherills did, stopping on the edge of the small Cliff Canyon and looking across to see what is apparently a city, with towers and walls, nestled in a niche of the rugged cliff wall.

In actuality, Cliff Palace, which was only one of the ruins that the Wetherills came upon in the same country, is the earlist example of the more modern apartment house. Although not found intact, the construction formerly consisted of about 200 dwelling rooms and 23 sacred rooms or kivas, some of which are built as high as four stories. The cave it occupies is shallow and Cliff Palace, extending from the cave to the rocky ledge and 300 feet along, is in the shape of a crescent.

* * * *

The system of tree-ring chronology has made possible accurate calculations of the age of prehistoric ruins as far back as the year 700 A. D. It is thus that the extreme dates of occupancy of Cliff Palace have been determined at 1073 and 1272 A. D., which embraces the time of its construction. Long before the building of Cliff Palace the cave in which it stands was inhabited. Indeed, it is believed the first agricultural Indians were there as far back as 1000 B. C.

Built During Crusades.

The years between 1073 and 1272 A. D. are termed prehistoric relative to the history of the United States. But in the civilized world at this time many things of lasting significance were going on.

In Europe this was the period of the Crusades, which were undertaken from 1096 to 1270 A. D. The throne of England was occupied by four Norman kings until the beginning of the reign of William the Conqueror, 1066, until the death of Stephen in 1154, to be followed by the Angevin or Plantaganet dynasty. In England the foundations of a free representative government were being laid. Louis, the Fat; Philip Augustus and Louis IX were reigning in France.

In the twelfth century the northern part of China was overrun by the Mongols, or Tartars, and in the middle of the thirteenth Kublai Khan established the Yuen dynasty. Portugal was overrun by the Goths, then in turn by the Saracens, or Moors, who were expelled by Alphonso in 1139. He then assumed the title of king.

Contemporary Events Cited.

At random, there are several particular rates worthy of mention during this period. The completion by William the Conqueror of the survey of the English realm, which is contained in the Domesday Book, 1086; his death the following year. The University of Paris, chartered by Philip II, 1201. A great Mongol empire raised by Ghengis Khan about 1203. Signing of the Magna Charta, in 1215, at Runnymede, by King John of England. Order of Teutonic Knights assisted the Poles, defeated the pagan Prussians, and settled permanently on the shores of the Baltic in 1231. Coal was first discovered, in 1223, near Newcastle, England. The golden horde of Mongols devastated Russia in the year 1240.

Houses in London about this year were still thatched with straw; the windows were of lattice or paper and they were without chimneys. A decade later the mariner's compass was first introduced among the navigators of the Baltic, by Waldeman, King of Sweden. Simon de Montfort secured the reins of power in England when he took the king prisoner; in 1265 he secured representation of the commons in Parliament; however, the king regained his full power within the year. In the year, 1271, Marco Polo set out on his travels.

Unfortunately, the cliff dwellers left no written records, which if we had them, might reveal just as colorful a history of the Indians as we have of contemporary civilization.

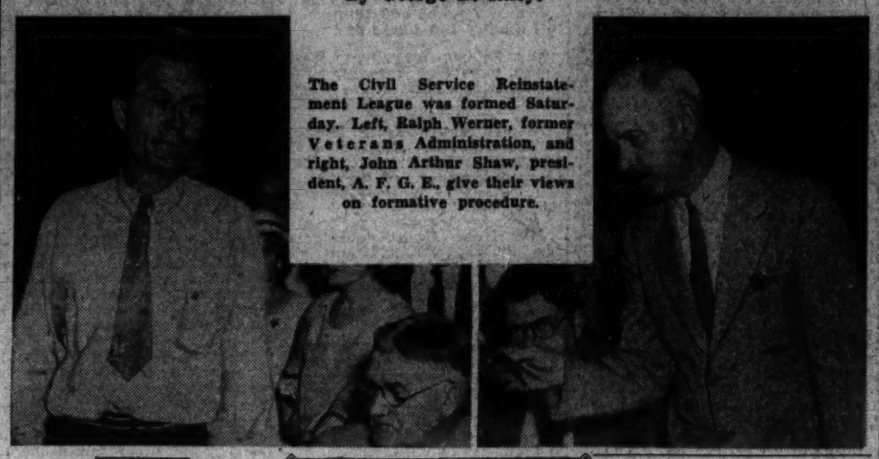
Chinese Kill Koreans And Japanese Guards

Tokyo, July 9 (A.P.).—A Rengo (Japanese) news agency dispatch from Seoul, capital of Korea, today said Chinese bandits attacked a convoy of about 4,000 Korean peasants under the guard of 27 Japanese soldiers en route to Paitsaoku, in southeastern Kirin Province, killing or wounding 32 Koreans and three Japanese.

When the convoy reached its destination 1,600 of the Koreans who started out were missing. Most of them are believed to be straglers, but it is feared many of them fell into the hands of the bandits.

The Federal Diary

By George D. Riley.



The Civil Service Reinstatement League was formed Saturday. Left, Ralph Werner, former Veterans Administration, and right, John Arthur Shaw, president, A. F. G. E., give their views on formative procedure.

SEVERAL hundred Federal employes and former employes gathered at the A. F. of L. Building Saturday and organized under the name of the Civil Service Reinstatement League, sponsored by the A. F. of L. and A. F. G. E. The theme of the meeting was "Not a New Deal, but a Square Deal."

Many were the statements of what were termed injustices in dismissing employes from Government duties. Said Mrs. Hazel E. King, Internal Revenue: "My dismissal from the Bureau of Internal Revenue becomes effective July 15. My efficiency rating is 91.62. In one of my civil service examinations I made 100 in shorthand. I think that if dismissed married women are not reinstated someone should be called upon to explain why certain husbands and wives, whose combined income is over $5,000, are being retained. I have no desire to cause the dismissal of any of these women. I am simply asking for a square deal myself. I believe that in presenting our problems to the President this question of combined income should be considered."

Said Ralph Werner, Veterans Administration: "I made the mistake of getting married. My wife stayed up all night trying to get me to sleep. Consequently, both of us lost through sick leaves and our ratings suffered. The clerks have been scared out of their shadows. The politicians have run over them. Our relatives in the States should remember these things at the ballot box."

John Arthur Shaw, president A. F. G. E.: "The Federal worker has a right to his share of work when we recall Secretary Roper has put all his family kin into jobs. Getting dismissed employes into private fields is impossible. They are best suited for Government work. Private industry has its own problems of lay-offs and reinstatements. Secretary Roper has simply pulled a herring across the trail. Work for the Government has become our careers. Have you ever seen an incompetent worker discharged? It is hard to do. This meeting should be followed up."

ONLY one person at the meeting reported having been reinstated.

Nellie Walker, G. P. O., reported dismissals in the cases of veterans and their wives has been countermanded, yet her husband, a veteran, and a "dozen others" were discharged.

Henry Bartmann, translator, Agriculture, reported he has been given a 65 per cent rating, yet he has worked there three years, formerly served Ambassador Gerard, served in Commerce and Justice.

And so we could recount many other cases.

Mr. Shaw says he wants Mr. Roosevelt to do "what he asks industry to do—to put these idle people back to work."

Next meeting will be July 15.

John A. Simpson was elected permanent chairman. Mrs. R. H. Young, secretary. A delegation, William Green, president, A. F. of L., Mr. Shaw, and Mrs. Simpson will seek a conference with Mr. Roosevelt early this week.

AGRICULTURE'S Official Record is the latest departmental publication on the executioner's block. This useful publication has aided in keeping the field force in touch with departmental trends.

The Official Record joins the long list scrapped the last twelve months, including Internal Revenue News, Commercial Standards Monthly, American Documented Seagoing Merchant Vessels, Radio Service Bulletin, Seismological Reports, Reclamation Era, and others.

The Federal Diary recommends the Pan-American Union Bulletin for a like fate. The current issue contains such enlightening articles as "The Ombu Tree," and "Heigh-ho, Come to the Fair." Why is the G. P. O. called upon to print "heigh-hoes" and "ombu trees," elaborately illustrated?

But when we recall the extended remarks of Tom Blanton and others in the Congressional Record——.

WE'VE heard of the baby going without shoes but listen to this one: Kingfish Fred G. Orsinger, Aquarium, has stuck some money over in the corner pocket with the best intentions of buying a pair of shoes. As he started for the shoe store all bets were off when he met Chairman Francis Barstow, Federal Diary—I. W. L. A. Salt Water Rodeo chairman.

The meeting reminded Fred of the rodeo and off he went and spent his shoe money for salt water tackle. The shoe purchase will go over to the next payday.

Agriculture employes are notified by Dr. W. W. The time will be charged to annual leave or leave without pay if annual leave is exhausted.

It may be of interest to know that "Law is the effort of society to protect persons in their rights and relations, to guard them in their property, enforce their contracts and punish their torts and crimes by means of judicial remedies administered by the Government." So declares the corpus juris law chart and calendar in the library, Department of Justice.

I'M AFRAID that you are overdoing the Capt. Baldwin case.

The forgotten man really is the plain, every-day Government clerk, the fellow with a family to support who is living on the dull, dead level line of mere existence, and with no medals on his chest either!

And now for actual, honest facts: The banks trimmed the Government employe; the Community Chest took some of his money, and the civic associations and Federal Employes Union collected dues from him regularly. What have these organizations done for him?

Not one has voiced a straightforward, sincere protest in his behalf.

And, lest I forget while I'm talking turkey, Federal employes support churches and synagogues. Why haven't these institutions gone on record as favoring decent living wages and a square deal (not a new deal) for Government clerks?

"BOOST Wages, Roosevelt Tells Industry"—headline. Apparently the President, too, believes the laborer is worthy of his hire. Perhaps, however, the Federal employe is not a "laborer."

And then we read "President Extends Pay Cuts Until 1934."

IT was his second solo flight. The shadows were lengthening. Wally Lipscomp, Commerce had his instructions on the way to land, but each time he came down a tailwind swept the field and he gave it the gun and left the field again. This thing kept up we don't know how many times.

You can always find a landing field by spotting a high tension line. Those wires looked like elephant trunks to Wally, all of which added little to his anticipated pleasure in landing.

Just about the time the game of tag was about to be called on account of darkness the airport manager ran out with a gun to shoot Wally down, so he wouldn't starve to death. The situation was tense. Just then the wind shifted. Wally made a perfect one-point landing, they say.

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES TO BE A CHAMPION FENCER!

● LEFT—GEORGE SANTELLI, who says: "I can enjoy as many Camels as I want and still know that my nerves are fit."

● WHEN THE THRILL of a brilliant saber bout brings the crowd to its feet, and you know that you are excited, tense—light up a Camel and learn for yourself how true it is that Camels are the cigarette for steady smoking.

STEADY SMOKERS TURN TO CAMELS

"A man can't fence his best unless his nerves are healthy," says George Santelli. "Fencing is one of the fastest sports there is—you've got to keep your reflexes and nerves in perfect condition. As a coach, I have fencing appointments from seven-thirty in the morning until ten or eleven at night. I can enjoy as many Camels as I want and still know that my nerves are ready and fit when fast action is needed."

Camels, with their costlier tobaccos, give a pleasure that never fades. Steady smokers find them always mild... cool... pleasing. They do not fray the nerves or leave a "cigaretty" aftertaste. Start smoking Camels today—for the new enjoyment you will find in a milder cigarette—for the sake of your nerves.

Museum Guide Rhapsodizes Over Masters Around Him

But Art Lover Was Trained in Far Different School and He Has Never Sought to Emulate Great of Culture.

A guide stood before a painting by Peter Paul Rubens at the National Museum yesterday afternoon. It was 4:30 and a bell was clanging. That meant that the guide was off duty. But he didn't move.

He was whispering, "Magnificent, magnificent." He was gazing at the painting of the wife and child of Rubens.

A fellow guide came by and touched him on the shoulder. "Time off, buddy," he said. "Clear the building."

The guide started and grinned sheepishly as he went about his duties.

"What was the matter with that painting?" he was asked by a reporter who witnessed the incident.

"Nothing," he answered in surprise. "I just love it. And, funny enough, it's the only painting by Rubens that I do like. Most of his paintings are too—too—well, too pronounced."

"Do you like any other paintings?"

"I like all this." He referred to the new John Gellatly $5,000,000 collection of paintings, plate and jewelry. "I like it so much that I have to watch myself. Sometimes I forget myself like I did just now. I'm just crazy about art. But they move me around, so I won't stay in this exhibit too long at a time. When I get too interested in the paintings, they move me in with the stuffed fish for a while. I never did like fish."

W. H. Chism—that's the guide's name—has been at the National Museum ever since he was discharged from the Army in 1922. He took the job as a matter of course, as other people do spinach and selling stockings, until the Gellatly collection was installed two months ago. Then Mr. Chism found himself. He is now the happiest guide in the museum.

With the pride of a dilettante escorting a fellow plutocrat through his Fifth avenue castle, Mr. Chism led the reporter to a cup carved out of solid emerald, to an excavated Byzantine necklace, to a garniture of an Austrian lady at court of the seventeenth century. At each exhibit his face glowed and he uttered superlatives.

Mr. Chism is also quite a psychologist. As soon as a visitor enters the gallery he can tell what he or she will like, what painting will be favored, how long the collection will be honored with the visitor's presence.

Asked if he had ever tried painting himself, Mr. Chism gave his chin a diffident rub.

"No, I've never tried," he said. "I used to be a builder."

Amos Parrish Covers Every Fashion Field

New Articles in The Post Are to Prove Invaluable Aid to Women.

Fashions in hats, coats, dresses and accessories, fashions in colors. Paris fashions, new gowns for evening, sports wear, afternoon bridge fashions, children's wear and men's wear—all these and more will be in the strikingly illustrated daily articles entitled: "What's in Fashion," by Amos Parrish, outstanding fashion authority, to appear in The Washington Post, beginning Monday, July 18. This feature will appear exclusively in The Post in Washington.

This authentic survey of fashion, based on accurate predictions and trends, makes it possible to present true fashions many months in advance, and Washington women who would be fashion-right will welcome this additional feature to the women's page of The Post.

"It is among women who lack fashion information that the impression arises that fashion is a will-o'-the-wisp," says Mr. Parrish. "Such women are often not aware of the fashion until it has nearly run its course. By the time they begin to conform, the fashion is passing out. In this way they are always in last season's fashion.

"The time to buy fashions is, of course, when they're coming in."

Furthermore, for women who like to live beautifully and in fashion, yet economically, furniture and home furnishings and home decorative schemes are regularly reported on, as well as other phases of prevailing and incoming fashions as they apply to present-day life.

Amos Parrish believes there are fashions in everything. "There are fashions in foods," he says, "and in newspapers, magazines, books, automobiles, kitchen utensils, table linens * * * in fact in everything sold in stores. And people want these things in fashion and rightly refuse things that are out of fashion.

WhiteCollar Men Lay Rails Speedily

Clovis, N. M., July 9 (A.P.).—The Santa Fe Railway Co.'s call for former railroad employes to help lay 36 miles of new rail in eastern New Mexico has brought together 135 men from all branches of the transportation business.

Former white-collared executives, clerks, engineers, firemen, dispatchers and telegraph operators are working side by side near Encino, N. M., and the section bosses are pleased.

A Guess?

IT IS the history of several of the leading experts that there is no such thing as an absolute guess for a really fine player during the play of a hand at Contract Bridge. These individuals contend that from either the bidding, the early play, the distribution, the type of defense put up by the adversaries, or even the emotions shown by them, such as signs of distress, a good player should be able to make some sort of deduction which will indicate the winning line of play to him.

I agree with this to a very great extent but not entirely. To be slightly facetious on the subject, I would ask these experts whether, if the opponents reached three notrump by one of the players bidding one notrump and the other jumping immediately to three the player to the left of Declarer, holding

Hearts	Q 7
Diamonds	Q J 10 9
Clubs	Q J 10 9

should open a diamond or a club. I contend that either lead would be the result of an absolute guess. Of course this is an unusual instance, but I think that there are other instances wherein a player has very little to go by and must rely purely and simply on instinct.

On the hand below the Declarer had to make a decision at trick 1, and on which rested the success or failure of his efforts to fulfill a Grand Slam contract.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	3◇	Pass
3♡	Pass	4NT(1)	Pass
5NT(2)	Pass	6♡(3)	Pass
7♡(4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—The four-notrump bid shows two Aces and the King of one of the bid suits. The newly found fit in hearts justifies North in making this bid, even though he has previously shown great strength by making a Forcing Takeout.
2—The correct response holding the remaining two aces.
3—North having overbid his hand up to this point, does not bid seven hearts, even though he knows his partner has the other two Aces, for there very well might be a heart or spade loser in the hand.
4—South, having considerably more than a minimum, a mild fit with his partner's diamonds and two pretty good suits of his own, must contract for seven in view of his partner's very strong bidding.

West's Opening lead was the diamond ten. Before playing a single card from the Dummy Declarer had to decide upon his plan of play. Counting his top tricks and the possibility of making his eight trumps separately, by means of cross-ruffing, Declarer could see only twelve tricks as absolutely certain.

For the thirteenth trick there were three definite possibilities. One line of play would be to play for the diamond suit to break 3-3, thus setting up two long diamonds in Dummy and ruffing only one spade in Dummy. This, due to the Opening lead of the diamond ten, which appeared like a short-suit lead, was immediately discarded by Declarer as being too dangerous. This left the choice of a club or spade finesse, and this choice had to be made immediately, as if a hand is to be cross-ruffed, the high-card winners must be cashed early in the play.

One must admit that the Declarer had pretty close to an absolute guess at this point. He knew that whether or not West held the spade King he would not have opened that suit and that his choice of diamonds rather than clubs might indicate that he feared to lead away from a high honor in the latter suit and thus give up a trick. On the other hand South knew that West, being very deceptive and a fine defensive player, would be just the one to deliberately lead away from a King in this situation to try to deceive the opponents.

After five minutes' thought, including a mental toss of a coin, Declarer finally decided on the club finesse because, as he explained afterward, "West looked like the type of person who held the club King."

Was this winning decision a guess or a brilliant bit of deduction? Whatever it was, South, after having won the club finesse, did succeed in cross-ruffing the hand to make his contract.

Tomorrow's Hand.

How should North and South bid their hands to reach the correct eventual contract, using the Four-Five Notrump Slam Convention?

North, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Walt Mason, Himself

The World's Most Famous Rhymester

Newly Poor.

WE USED to view the newly rich with something of disdain; they'd risen from some sordid ditch by unexpected gain; and frequently they bore along the manners of the slum, and everything they did was wrong, and rude, and out of plumb. They swaggered bravely on their way, like birds of paradise, they liked to make a vain display, to dazzle people's eyes. They thought their smackers should procure the homage of the crowd, they thought their rubles should insure that all heads would be bowed. But evermore there was a hitch, the cards were always stacked; we didn't love the newly rich, and let them know the fact. And now we have the newly poor, each day such folk we meet; they're camping on the lonely moor, they walk the village street. And once they lived in marble halls, or in apartments fine, but now they've pawned their overalls, that they may sup or dine. There is no swagger in their stride, about their fate they joke; they are not swollen up with pride because they are dead broke. They're just as modest in their ways, as diligent to please, as in the olden, golden days when money grew on trees. So men respect the newly poor, who once were rich and great; long may that fortitude endure which makes them smile at fate.

The Meanderer Says

Delightful Luncheons for Shoppers Featured by Restaurants.

As essential to the good shopper as a good buy is good food. The Meanderer knows that without a satisfactory luncheon that old stamina can't be maintained, and without that old stamina the smoothest little bargain on the market may elude the eye.

After a busy morning of making the rounds, and in view of the follow-ups in the afternoon, it is well for the shopper to keep in mind that an hour of complete relaxation over the noonday meal is a matter of strict economy. It is during this period she catches her second wind, rests both her body and mind, preparatory to making the judicious shopping decisions. A hasty bite is not sufficient. To insure a really successful day she should take care that this hour be designed to remove anxieties.

The surest means of accomplishing this is a novel luncheon in a cool and comfortable place. What would you say to something in the real old Southern style? For instance, pig's jowl, black-eyed peas and sweet potatoes, prepared for you by an honest-to-goodness Georgia black boy, who "done got his larnin' from his mammy."

Those of you with artistic temperaments would, I'm sure, appreciate a certain colorful plate to be had at a G street tea room. It consists of beets, carrots, potatoes and tomatoes arranged in an harmonious design, and delightfully garnished. This luncheon includes a choice of beverage and desert, all for the impressive sum of 35 cents. Don't miss a perfect chance to pay off an obligation in a tasteful and inexpensive way. Refer the responsive obligatee to the Meanderer.

Luncheon for the shopper on upper Connecticut avenue is a veritable pleasure. One place of particular interest combines an air of hospitality with genteel charm. Here at noon you are sure of meeting more than a few of your shopping compatriots, all as eager as you, perhaps, to compare the morning's notes. The spacious accommodation is such that it provides romantic corners where two sweet young things may bill and coo to their hearts' content. Or is that done any more?

Some distance from Washington in the vicinity of Silver Spring is one of the most delightful spots you can imagine. Consider your luncheon engagement as a sort of outing and drive out there. The Meanderer promises you won't be disappointed, not if you like the ideal rural blended with smart sophistication. Here you may sit on a lawn terrace beneath the soothing shade of striped umbrellas and look out across the fields, hills and dales of the surrounding countryside. Here sat the Meanderer when all of a sudden the wind did blow and the rain descended. "Woe," she wailed, "The day is ruin!" Not a bit of it. Quicker than the eye could see she was whisked into a large, bright room. There was music here, and flowers, and the spirit of conviviality. Heave ho, m'lads, 'tis a seemly port in time of storm!

As the luncheon problem unraveled itself for the shoppers on upper Connecticut, so does it do likewise for those below the circle. Within a few blocks of the busiest section the Meanderer found a little bit of old England. There in a cool, stone basement, dimly lighted with beaten brass lanterns hung on to worm-eaten beams, is the essence of bygone days. One waits half expectantly to hear the rollicking tune of a tavern song. The Meanderer wanted to see John Falstaff squeezing in through the door. They told her he wouldn't be in that day.

To those of you who are such vehement shoppers that noon time finds you free, the Meanderer suggests that instead of undergoing the ordeal of returning home to prepare luncheon, keep in mind the specialty boxes prepared by a certain delicatessen. These contain half a fried chicken, potato salad, cold slaw, olives, pickles, four rolls, and fudge brownies for dessert. Intrinsic value: 69 cents. Extrinsic value: incalculable.

Down by the waterfront is a fascinating place for all ye lovers of good sea food. The menu suggests an infinite variety; in fact, anything short of Balaenoptera Acutorostrata. If you aren't in a hurry you may sit out on a little balcony overlooking the river and watch the picturesque fishermen in their little flat bottom boats catch your dinner for you. We wouldn't say fish story, not for the world!

Maple Furniture Features Store's Model Living Room

The charm of maple furnishings is well expressed in this photograph of a model living room arranged by a local department store. This type of furniture, so appropriate in the informal living room, has surprisingly low prices. Put the Salad First . . .

"Appetizer salads" are a new thought for the meal planner.

Try serving the salad as a first course, then see if that new menu term "appetizer salad" isn't a well-chosen name. A crisp, cold salad at each place on a hot summer evening will persuade the most lagging appetite in the family to eat dinner with a relish.

Serving the salad first will mean rearranging the usual serving of a meal. Menus for such meals may consist of these suitable summer foods:

Shrimp and Asparagus Salad
Hot Vegetable Platter, Bran Muffins
Spiced Pears Butter Cookies
Hot or Iced Coffee

Some additional hot weather dinner suggestions follow:

Molded Summer Vegetable Salad
Assorted Cold Cuts Horse Radish
Hot Potato Chips
Toasted English Muffins

Jellied Tomato Salad
Cold Lamb Mint Jelly
Baked Potatoes
Cold Asparagus with Mayonnaise
Strawberry Ice Cream
Hot or Iced Coffee

Shrimp and Asparagus Salad.

½ cup whole cooked shrimp
24 cooked asparagus tips (1 bunch fresh asparagus)
½ recipe chili mayonnaise sauce

Arrange shrimp and asparagus tips on crisp lettuce. Pour chili mayonnaise sauce over shrimps and asparagus tips just before serving. Serves six.

Chili Mayonnaise Sauce.

1 cup mayonnaise
½ cup chili sauce
¼ cup vinegar.

¼ cup cold water.
¼ cup boiling water.
1 tablespoon vinegar.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 cup cucumber, diced.
1 cup red radishes, thinly sliced.

½ cup mayonnaise.

Soften gelatin in cold water. Add boiling water and dissolve. Add vinegar and salt. When cool add remaining ingredients in order given. Turn into individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with additional mayonnaise, thinned with a little tomato juice. Serves eight.

ELEGANCE!

Oh the pleasure that one derives from elegance! Whether it is elegance seen or felt or heard, whether it is elegance of conscious thought, or elegance of unconscious gesture!

About an elegant woman there is an aura of repose, and loveliness that delights and charms one way down deep inside. One may not be conscious of this, but one knows that the sight and the presence of an elegant—and consequently lovely, woman, gives one something of a spiritual uplift—makes all life seem more beautiful.

Women can give so much to life by just being! Especially today—more than ever in the life of the world, is it important that women hold straight the keel of civilization, as it were. And hold this by being more than ever careful of their elegance, by being aware of the need for it.

The lovely women of the world are doing it. And the Haute Couture is helping them, since the Haute Couture is an institution devoted to the keeping alive of elegance through women.

A famous French elegante recently married. She chose most of her wedding clothes from the house of Molyneux. And the selection she made is as good as a handbook to elegance! This lovely woman, with centuries of elegance behind her, with plenty of money to spend on her clothing—and enough social affairs to dress for, chose gowns and suits, wraps and negligees of the utmost elegance and simplicity. A mauve heavy crinkled crepe, for instance, which emerged in a beautiful effect as of a tight little bunch of heliotrope, due to the fine black threads which ran through the "crinkles" of one ensemble she chose for her trousseaux.

Would you like to have a new beach outfit? Just a simple gesture—with the help of our leaflet! But a bathing suit like the one I tell you to make is anything but a simple gesture when it comes to buying it—if you have tried pricing dressmaker suits! Then there is a nice beach hat and bag in this leaflet, too. I figured you would be about tired of the bathing ensemble you had by now, and want to see a new one—so the leaflet is yours for sending a stamped (3-cent), self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post.

How to Keep Well

By W. A. Evans.

Carbon Monoxide in Air.

HOW much is the street air polluted by carbon monoxide, and how much harm is done to people who breathe this air as they pursue their ordinary vocations? This is a question that is often asked. The answers given are varied and sometimes contradictory.

One method of answering it scientifically has been to collect air and analyze it. Preliminary to the building of a vehicular tunnel in New York City, those in charge employed a skilled physiological chemist to collect information on the subject. He fashioned a funnel in the windshield of his automobile, and this led into gas bags. As he drove along the street he gathered air under different conditions of traffic and examined it for carbon monoxide. Another line of approach is by examining the blood of people for the gas. Carbon monoxide is harmful because it makes a close combination with the hemoglobin of the blood. There is some disagreement between those who say that the sum total of the harm it does is interfering with the capacity of the blood to carry oxygen, and those who claim that in additional, it is a direct poison.

In the study made by Gettler and Mattice it was assumed that no harmful effects of carbon monoxide are felt by a person until carbon monoxide in his blood lowers its oxygen carrying power from 15 to 20 per cent. In a group of people who lived in the country and who had but little exposure to automobile fumes the carbon monoxide of the blood averaged one-quarter of 1 per cent, and the percentage of their hemoglobin saturated with the poison averaged well under one. Four had percentages over one. One had as high as 3.6. At the other end of the line was a group of New York City taxi drivers whose blood showed from 1.5 to 4.3 per cent of carbon monoxide. The saturation of hemoglobin with carbon monoxide was always over 8, and in one case was 19. It appears that large-city taxi drivers usually have about as much carbon monoxide in the blood as they can stand without having symptoms.

A group of people who work on the streets in New York City—most of them street cleaners—had an average of seven-tenths of 1 per cent carbon monoxide, and the degree of saturation ranged from one to seven. They were below the level of demonstrable harm, though many of them were not so well off as they might have been. A group of people who use the streets as do the business man and office worker were well below the line of danger. Only about 1 to 1½ per cent of their hemoglobin bonds were occupied by carbon monoxide.

It is fair to conclude that, for the ordinary user, city street air is still reasonably safe, so far as carbon monoxide is concerned. People who drive automobiles continually, policemen on certain locations, workers in foundries and rolling mills, cooks in kitchens and people in rooms heated by stoves and gas heaters are liable to be in greater danger. One of the conclusions arrived at by Gettler and Mattice is that smoking loads the blood with carbon monoxide more than does driving a car on a city street.

Chickenpox.

F. M. writes: There are three or four cases of chickenpox on our street. I have a boy, 6, and a girl, 4, and am quite worried.

1. How should chickenpox be treated?
2. Is there a special diet?
3. Should the case be kept in bed?
4. Should a doctor be called?

Reply.

1. Ordinary cases require no treatment. It is self-limited, with a marked tendency to recovery.
2. No.
3. As a rule no.
4. In many cases diagnosis requires examination by a physician, the principal reason for this being the possibility that the case may be one of smallpox. Some cases of supposed chickenpox are cases of smallpox.

Dead Teeth.

H. writes: Some dentists tell us that dead teeth ought to be removed. Other dentists say they can stay in until there is some evidence of serious trouble. By "dead teeth" is meant teeth from which the nerve has been removed.

Reply.

You can get a variety of opinions—many for and many against. There is no general answer. A categoric answer either way should be accompanied by a long list of qualifications.

Posture Rules Listed in New U. S. Bulletin

Value of Children's Play, Food and Rest Are Stressed.

Help for harassed parents who weary of urging their youngsters to "stand up straight" is contained in a new bulletin, "Good Posture in the Little Child," just published by the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor.

Good posture is much more than merely "standing straight;" it is the use of all parts of the body with proper balance, with ease and grace. Exercise and play that include creeping, balancing, running, jumping, skipping on tip toe, climbing, swinging by the arms and throwing, bring about the best all-round development of the body and in a healthy child lay the best foundation for good posture. Since poor posture is very often found in the child who is overfatigued and poorly nourished, special attention must be given to all those aspects of the child's daily routine that insure good nutrition and prevent fatigue. "An adequate, well-balanced diet, long hours of sleep at night and a rest during the day, outdoor exercise (but not too much) and sunlight are all necessary to restore a poorly nourished, overfatigued child to normal," the bulletin states, recommending also periodic health examinations to check-up on the child's general physical condition.

"To teach a young child to use his body well is not difficult if appeal is made to his imagination and love of imitation," the bulletin says, introducing a novel series of posture exercises, which are in reality games that help to develop habits of good posture for children about 2 to 6 years old. While pretending to be paper dolls or giants, ducks, seals, rabbits, mules, elephants or tight-rope walkers, the children who play these games are being taught how to stand well and walk well. The games should help the child to form the habit of using his whole body well while he is doing the ordinary things of life, such as sitting, standing and walking.

Other aids to good posture include careful selection of clothes and shoes, since "a child can not develop good habits of posture unless his body is free to develop normally without being pressed or pulled into unnatural positions by wrong clothing;" chairs and tables adapted to the child's size, a bed of his own in which the child has plenty of room to turn and move in his sleep and in which the bedclothes are light and not too tight, and simple home-made play apparatus that will help children develop their muscles. The bulletin describes several types of simple play apparatus which can be put up even in a small yard or on a porch. Parents are likewise warned against choosing for their children types of toys or play apparatus which, instead of helping the child's body to develop normally and symetrically, either force him into wrong positions or lead him to use one side of his body while the other is neglected.

Uncle Sam Tells Proper Way of Making Iced Tea

Iced tea, a beverage suited to the queen's taste, is made or marred according to the tea maker's skill, according to Bureau of Home Economics. Try ways suggested below for making the most of iced tea.

(Associated Press.)

With iced tea fans demanding their frosted glasses these hot afternoons, the Bureau of Home Economics comes forward with suggestions on how to make the beverage to "the queen's taste."

There is all the difference in the world, it says, between "just cold tea and a dainty pitcher filled with a golden brown liquid, tinkling with ice and garnished with green leaves and slices of lemon."

Use a teapot, preferably of earthenware, china or glass. Heat it by scalding with boiling water. Strength of the brew can vary, but the standard quantity is usually about "a teaspoonful to each cup desired."

Always use freshly drawn water; measure it and bring it to a bubbling boil before pouring in on the tea leaves. Water boiled too long makes tea flat.

If the water is not actually boiling, it will not bring out the full strength of the tea. Steep three to four minutes for clear tea, and four to five minutes to serve with cream and milk or for iced tea.

Serve promptly or pour it off into another previously scalded receptacle. Never boil tea and never use tea leaves a second time.

Green and Oolong teas often are preferred for serving plain or with sugar and lemon. The black teas when served hot are better with cream or milk, although they can be served without either. Sweetening is a matter of taste.

If the black teas are served clear, it is considered better to brew them from three to four minutes for hot tea, and from four to five minutes for iced tea.

Ginger Rogers Designs Gown for Weddings

The gown has large bouffant sleeves covered with the organdie daisies, and the same crisp, white flowers cover a tiny muff the charming model carries, and edge the maline veil, short and circular in cut. White lace mittens complete the costume.

Hot Oil Treatments Recommended for Hair

Hot oil treatments are the most effective way to preserve the natural life and sheen of the hair, according to Pert Kelton, featured in "Bed of Roses."

Heat pure olive oil. Then rub it thoroughly into the hair and scalp before retiring. Leave it on all night and in the morning wash the hair with castile soap or some good shampoo. This treatment applied every two weeks will pay good dividends in hair health and beauty.

Witch Hazel Pack Used To Relieve Eye Strain

A drawn look about the eyes which comes from fatigue and strain may be relieved by the use of a witch hazel pack, says Shirley Chambers, screen star. Saturate two small cotton packs with witch hazel and place them upon the closed eyes. Leave them there a full five minutes. The result will be apparent in your appearance and feelings.

Guiding Your Child

OVERWEIGHT.

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne.

To be a fat boy or a fat girl is frequently regarded simply as a joke, a difficulty which the child supposedly outgrows or which is "in the family" and so can not be remedied. Depending upon the extent to which a child is overweight, this condition is to be regarded as a serious physical handicap, and as a social and psychological one.

The fat boy or girl may develop a technique of taking ridicule without letting it apparently ruffle his reputedly good disposition, but that does not mean that it makes him happy or that, indeed, he does not suffer under it.

Such a child does not attempt to learn games in which quickness and skill are important. He is probably shy about getting into a bathing suit in which he cuts a peculiarly ludicrous figure. At parties, he knows no one wants him for a dance partner and that no one of the opposite sex is particularly pleased or flattered by his attentions.

At every turn, even though he is accepted by his age group, the overweight child is made to feel inferior, and so tends to retire within himself. He does not try to compete with others of his age. Often, he does not learn what special aptitudes he possesses, for the simple reason that he has never had the courage to try them out.

An overweight child should be taken to a doctor for diagnosis, and then should follow the course of treatment prescribed. Daily exercises and a dietary regime often are all that is necessary to bring his weight down to normal.

Such exercising and dieting can only be carried on with cooperation from the parents, who have to accept the problem as an entirely serious one and help the child consistently to carry out the remedial regime.

What Today Means

By Mary Blake.

"CANCER."

INFLUENCES operating on this day will tend to make people careless in the handling of business affairs; particularly is this true of those who are in the employ of others. Housewives will tend to be lax in discharging their duties; they will not buy shrewdly on this date. Children will not be attentive.

The child born on this July 10 will probably be a little one on whom gifts will always be showered. You may anticipate that this child will do its best when in competition with others. This is true not only in regard to its school work, but in all matters as well. The child will not like to be second best in anything.

If July 10 is the date of your birth you are inclined to be "nosey" and to pry into the affairs of others. Often you are well meaning and seek to help others, but, in many cases, it is purely curiosity. In regard to your own affairs, you pretty well keep your own counsel; with regard to the affairs of others, you are inclined to be gossipy, even catty. Quite possibly you are much in demand socially, for yours is a gay nature, and you are not without many appealing qualities. The women born on this date are greatly attractive to the opposite sex. They are extremely feminine and dainty and appeal strongly to the protective instinct of men. The men are flirtatious, but seldom are they unfaithful to their mates.

Born on July 10, there is very likely much of the gambler about you; you take risks in business that are not always wise. You like to play for big stakes. Win or lose, you are not one to boast of or cry over the turn of events.

Successful people born on July 10: Benjamin F. De Costa, clergyman. Alvin G. Clark, optician and astronomer. John W. Griggs, jurist and governor.

Golf Meet

"Beautiful shot!" exclaims Doris. "And look what distance," chimes in Judy. "Come on, let's follow that one up!" Her black and white checked pique coat is worn over a white pique skirt and black linen blouse. Doris contrasts navy blue accessories with her suit of natural linen crash.

Across the green they come—and what a colorful parade! Lavender and cool green are the colors worked into a plaid gingham frock. The new pale green that Paris is launching appears in this spectator coat with the Schiaparelli shoulder line. It is worn over a black dress. Bright yellow corduroy is featured in the swagger suit.

Plaid again? And what a plaid! Rose, black and white, a combination hard to beat, in a tunic dress with youthful sleeves and neckline. Tie silk is as attractive on the links as it is in town on hot summer days. There is something awfully cool looking about this navy frock with the chartreuse dots and crisp organdie bow.

The winner, a gay young woman, has followed through in a very sporty costume consisting of beige heavy linen skirt, white shirtwaist and a soft brown and white silk handkerchief. The belt is of brown leather. Judy notices that white felt and panama hats have replaced many of the earlier cotton chapeaux.

Mortgage Relief.

Improved conditions in agricultural regions will lessen materially the task confronting the Farm Credit Administration. Congress made available to the Farm Credit Administration $2,000,000,000 to be used in refinancing farm mortgages. But only an infinitesimal part of that sum has been used.

Foreclosures are very rare at present, according to Henry Morgenthau, jr., governor of the Farm Credit Administration. His statement is corroborated by private observers who have been surveying conditions in the farm belt.

The farm mortgage section of the agricultural relief act is designed to function only in times of great emergency. It provides for the exchange of mortgages for Federal Land Bank bonds. But loans obtained in this way may not exceed 50 per cent of the normal value of the land mortgaged. Mortgage holders taking advantage of the act are required to scale down the face value of their mortgages, giving the farmer the benefit of the discount. In the present situation few mortgage holders are willing to sacrifice a part of the obligations owed them. They prefer to be lenient with the farmer in the hope that rising prices and land values will enable him to pay in full.

A large volume of farm mortgages is held by insurance companies. At a meeting of insurance company representatives with Mr. Morgenthau in May they refused to turn over to the Government large numbers of farm mortgages on which they would lose money. Instead, the insurance companies sought to avoid foreclosures, and to wait for a more promising day.

Apparently private agencies have helped to solve the farm mortgage problem—at least for the present—without the necessity of large drains upon the Treasury. If the increased purchasing power of the farmer can be sustained it will relieve the Government of a vast responsibility as a holder of farm mortgages.

Mattern's Experience.

Evidently the country is about to hear a most dramatic story from Siberia—the experiences of the flyer "Jimmie" Mattern, who crashed on his flight from Khabarovsk to Nome. He fell at a point about 80 miles west of Anadyr on June 14, and it was not until July 5 that a wireless message from that village reported that he was safe. An additional message via Moscow reports that his plane was crushed to pieces but that he escaped unhurt.

What were Mattern's experiences between June 14 and July 5, in the Siberian wilderness? The country into which he dropped is not only sparsely inhabited, but is extremely cold, even at this season. The Moscow wireless stated that on July 5 "Mattern was found and shipped to Anadyr." It is surmised by the word "shipped" that Mattern was badly disabled when found. He may have suffered torture from hunger as well as exposure in the twenty-one days of his wanderings.

Mattern has requested a new plane to continue his flight. One wireless report stated that he had been forced down by engine trouble and that a new motor would be provided for him. He is so plucky that he might resume his world flight if not physically disabled, but it is feared that the three weeks in which he was lost to the world may have dealt savagely with him.

Brains and Physique.

Austria's premier is one inch short of five feet in height, but his lack of stature has not deterred him from assuming authority in his country and dominating its policies at a most critical time. He is by no means an exception in history. The instances of small men who have risen to positions of power are numerous.

The world does not always realize the deference it pays to a distinguished presence. Bulk and brawn often secure instant acceptance, even for positions requiring brains and experience, when a man of much greater intelligence, but of less imposing physique, may be overlooked until long years of demonstrated efficiency have marked him for consideration. The feeling that superiority must go with a heroic figure is a heritage of the days when brute strength alone was requisite to leadership.

In the old days there were not many instances in which the Davids overcame the Goliaths, but today the superiority which may win success need only repose in the first three inches under a man's hat. The lack of physical strength has often been the cause of a richer mental development. Inability to compete in sports and the hardier tasks of life has not infrequently given to the world mental contributions which are much more lasting than the fame of physical prowess.

This was the case with Dr. Dollfuss. As a schoolboy the jibes of his playmates resulted in his determination to prepare himself by study and superior mental equipment to be a man among men, despite his miniature size. How well he succeeded was shown by his successful formation of an Austrian cabinet when no one else would undertake it, and the organization of a government that under his firm control has saved his country from domination by Hitlerism.

Foreign Public Works.

President Roosevelt would like to see foreign governments imitate the United States in raising domestic commodity prices and providing employment by means of public works. He is said to be convinced that the rise of prices in this country has made an impression upon foreign governments and that they may be persuaded to adopt methods for bringing about similar results. The American delegates at London are exploring this subject in collaboration with their foreign colleagues, in the hope that commodity prices may be raised in all important countries.

Public works in behalf of unemployment relief are opposed in some countries on account of the difficulty of financing large programs. Bond flotations in foreign countries are not easy. The governments are dealing with their unemployment problems by various methods, and usually they are reluctant to bring out too sharply the fact that the unemployed are supported by heavy taxation of the employed. Unemployment relief through bond issues for public works requires for its success general public willingness to pay extra emergency taxes. There is little evidence that citizens of many European countries are willing or even able to lend large sums to their respective governments.

Any plan to float such foreign loans in the United States would meet obstacles. The cry would be raised that Americans were asked to lend fresh money to countries which had failed to repay previous loans. The presumptive sequence of increased prices and abolition of unemployment is increased buying power by all classes, attended by increased international commerce and therefore an increased foreign demand for American products which would help to take up the slack in industry and agriculture. But a direct appeal to Americans to subscribe to foreign loans for public works on the ground that thereby they would be helping their own commerce might fall upon deaf ears, in view of heavy losses in foreign investments.

Modernization of Battleships.

President Roosevelt looks with a sympathetic eye upon enlargement of the Navy, both because of the new policy declaring for "a navy second to none," and because naval construction will aid employment. Secretary Swanson was early in proposing use of public works funds for construction of 32 new vessels, and $46,000,000 was allotted for that purpose for the coming year, with a total of $238,000,000 authorized. He now asks for $77,000,000 to be expended for modernization of the battleships California, Washington, Colorado, Maryland and Tennessee, and $37,000,000 for construction work at shore stations. About 85 per cent of the sums asked for would go for labor.

A modernized battleship gains enormously in fighting strength. Elevation of the big guns increases their range and hitting power. Better antiaircraft guns afford protection which formerly was not needed. The same is true of "blisters" on the hull, which ward off torpedoes. Installation of new boilers and engines increases steaming radius and speed.

If the allotment for battleship modernization should be granted, the guns of the battleships Texas and New York will be elevated, in addition to similar changes on the five other battleships named. Some necessary improvements will also be made on cruisers and smaller vessels.

Naval authorities here and abroad concur in the opinion that the present battleship efficiency of the Japanese navy is superior to the American. This condition will be changed when the American battleships now undergoing modernization are again in commission, and modernization of five more battleships, together with elevation of the guns of two more, will raise the efficiency of the United States Navy to a place second only to that of the British navy.

A Futile Agreement.

Six years ago a large number of commercial nations joined hands in a movement to abolish restrictions that were said to be hampering world trade. A conference called under the auspices of the League of Nations adopted the International Convention for the Abolition of Import and Export Prohibitions and Restrictions. The agreement was hailed with a great deal of enthusiasm as the beginning of a new era in world trade.

A few days ago the State Department announced the withdrawal of the United States from that convention. The incident attracted little attention, because the public has forgotten about the ambitious movement of 1927 to abolish restrictions on world trade. The convention had become, in the language of a State Department official "but another pious expression of good intentions." Yet it represents an earnest attempt to relieve world trade of national impediments. The fate of this convention illustrates the extreme difficulty of abolishing restrictions that are so closely allied to interests of domestic enterprises.

Portugal withdrew from the convention two years ago, and Great Britain gave notice last month that she would take similar action. Then came the decision of the United States to do likewise. In announcing the State Department's action Acting Secretary Phillips said that "the withdrawal from the convention of other nations which had adhered leads to the conclusion that the existing convention may not be fully adapted to present economic and commercial conditions in the world." Another objective of the State Department, he said, was to clear the way for another attack upon trade barriers at the World Economic Conference.

Removal of all restrictions and prohibitions against imports and exports within six months was the broad purpose of the convention of 1927. But the delegates to the conference had gone much further than their respective governments were ready to go. When legislative assemblies in the principal world capitals considered the convention, they decided that numerous reservations were advisable. Congress was no exception. The United States ratified the agreement in 1930 with the proviso that it should not interfere with the various trade policies of this country. When the reservations of all the ratifying countries were brought together, the convention had been reduced to a meaningless document that was devoid of practical effect.

A number of countries, including France, refused to ratify the convention in any form. Some had made such extensive reservations that their ratification was considered of no effect. To avoid complete failure seven countries—the United States, Great Britain, Japan, Sweden, Denmark, the Netherlands and Portugal—put the agreement into effect among themselves, with the understanding that any of them might withdraw on June 30 of any year.

The convention has apparently served no useful purpose because each government took exception to all of the provisions that it did not like. It is unfortunate that agreements of this kind are so enthusiastically appraised when they are merely budding and so easily forgotten when they blossom into futility.

Termite Invasion.

At the centenary celebration of the founding of the Entomological Society, which recently took place in London, it was pointed out that of all the members of the animal kingdom, insects constitute the most serious menace to the prosperity and even the existence of man. It is their multitudes that destroy crops, ravage stores and clothing, attack implements and treasures, and ruin buildings. As carriers of disease they bring suffering and death to untold numbers of men and beasts. On the other hand, there are indispensable insects, without which most fruits and flowers would be quickly exterminated. It is the task of the entomologist to distinguish between useful and destructive insects, and to develop the means of controlling pests.

Today the entomologist comes forward to warn the people of this country against the termite—the deadly white ant of the tropics—which has invaded the United States. The first real damage occurred in California in 1926, where the termite had been found before, but in insignificant numbers. Later termites appeared in Kansas City, and during the past year they have invaded New York. The termite is the world's premier wood destroyer, since it lives on cellulose. The queen ant can produce 84,400 eggs a day over long periods. Huge colonies are bred with incredible rapidity.

After finding a few isolated cases of termite destruction in New York, George E. Sanders, an authority on the subject, predicted in 1931 that by 1934 termites would be a pest of major importance in the New York area. According to a recent statement, Mr. Sanders considers the termite already a major pest. Many cases of destroyed floors, sills and woodwork have been reported. Experiments in treating woodwork with preventive poisons are on foot in an effort to cope with the termite invasion.

Bacteria Eaters.

From the New York Times.

Strange tales come from New York's aquarium—recalling the healing springs of medieval days. People afflicted with skin diseases beg for permission to dip their hands into tanks teeming with tropical fish. It is because of a casual announcement made by Drs. Coates and Breder. Wondering why aquarium water remained clear and healthful despite the fish that swam in it, they hit upon the bacteriophage—devourer of bacteria. Dr. Coates' own festered hand healed wonderfully when accidentally brought in contact with aquarium-water bacteriophages. Cases of skin diseases have been similarly cured.

The discovery is not wholly new. In 1915 the Englishman Twort saw cultures of deadly cocci killed by a filtrate derived from others of their kind. Prof. Felix d'Herelle, lately retired from Yale, made the same discovery independently after the war and applied it practically in Mexico and India. * * * Is there perhaps a polyphage—an organism so insatiable that it will devour all forms of microbic life? Drs. Coates and Breder have locked their doors, hoping to find the answer in aquarium water.

Evidently the days of the romantic accident are not gone in science. There is still room for the keen eye, the inquisitive mind, the haphazard groper. But having recognized this, the real test of biology begins. To discover a diamond is one thing; to relate it chemically to graphite, coal and charcoal is another. So with the bacteria eaters. What are they? No microscope can reveal them. They pass through the finest filters. A pretty controversy is raging about them. Some hold with d'Herelle that they are ultramicroscopic parasites. Others are convinced that they ought to be classed with the filterable viruses—particles which are likewise ultramicroscopic but which can propagate only in the living cells that they infect. Where there is so much guessing there is work to be done. Yet it is clear enough that medicine and bacteriology stand upon the threshold of an advance as great as any ever made.

The Clerk Encouraged to Rob Customers Will Eventually Rob His Boss

By Robert Quillen

A MAN who believed in free speech once said: "I hate the thing you say, but I will fight to the death to defend your right to say it."

No man can call himself a friend of liberty until he can say as much.

And no man can call himself a believer in justice until he can say: "This tax doesn't affect me, but it is unjust to you and I shall fight it to the last ditch."

It isn't the fact of justice that matters, but the spirit. The worst of tyrants might be just by accident.

Writing men who hate injustice rejoiced when investigators exposed the fact that very rich men escape the income tax. It confirmed a truth they had preached for years: that the income tax is unfair, ineffectual and evil.

As a matter of fact, it is a tax on salaried people. They alone pay it in full.

Is it a fair arrangement if nine men in ten are trusted to return their property for taxation and the tenth is given no choice?

Is it fair if the nine are free to return much or little while the income of the tenth is reported without his consent?

That is the way the tax works.

The income of the salaried man is reported by his employer to the last penny. He must return the same figure or go to jail. There is no escape for him.

But every other citizen in the land—the rich man with a million-dollar income and the "poor" man who earns five thousand a year—the merchant, the farmer, the professional man and the trader—all alike are free to escape the tax by making no return at all, or to job their books and escape the greater part of it.

And if you think they don't take advantage of these privileges, you know very little about human nature and the history of taxation.

One whose income is great must make some kind of return or eventually arouse suspicion. But the border cases—those who earn but a few hundred or a few thousand above the exemption—escape the tax year after year by making no return. Their names aren't on the books. They don't exist. And though they number millions, they never are molested.

The rich and the moderately prosperous who escape by selling property to their wives or otherwise faking the records are equally safe. The Government takes it for granted that the books are truthful; it can't take millions of cases into court.

Two and a half million pay income tax and forty million vote. If that isn't a class tax, what is it?

Our "leaders" make no complaint, for it pays them to stand in with the crowd. But some day they will learn that no man's hen roost is safe while one man is losing chickens.

Political Comment

Repeal in the Solid South.
Kansas City Star.

The forecast of a favorable vote on repeal in the three distinctly Southern States that first are to pass upon that issue—Alabama, Arkansas and Tennessee—is indicative of the swift and far-reaching public sentiment that has been developed on this controversial question. So pronounced has that sentiment become that there is little of the ordinary risk in predicting the result of a popular expression at the polls. Although but a third of the States have voted and the majority of those were concededly wet long before the tests were taken, it now seems an established fact that the repeal movement is to encounter few obstacles in its forward sweep.

To Fight Racketeers.
Los Angeles Times.

What is said to be the first organization of its kind in the United States—at least outside of Chicago—has been formed in Oakland and named the Alameda County Anti-Racketeering Council. Its avowed purpose is to start immediate action against all rackets that exist in the county and to prevent others from gaining a foothold.

"The council," says District Attorney Earl Warren, who is giving the movement his full support, "is not to be a general reform and crusading body. It will work only with racketeering and gangster and criminal affairs for general community protection."

Interview With an American Farmer.

"How're things on the farm, Cy?"

"Hear from Washington?"

"Yep. They keep the books. I get a quarterly report on how I've been doin'."

* * * *

"How're all the cows?"

"I dunno much about the cows. I've sort of lost touch."

"How so?"

"Well, the administration is lookin' after the herd now. A Federal man drives 'em to and from pasture and a Cabinet officer milks' em every night."

* * * *

"Is your poultry doing well?"

"Purty good. Since Washington took the farm over the poultry's goin' great guns. I couldn't get the hens to lay very stiddy, but this here Prof. Moley fixed that. He's got the hens laying two eggs a day now."

"I dunno. The Brain Trust says it's all part of the new order."

* * * *

"How's crops, Cy?"

"Everything looks purty fair, although I wouldn't know very much about 'em."

"You wouldn't know much about 'em?"

"Nope. I don't bother with details no more. The Government's got a brigadier general, a retired naval officer and a couple of professors here. They've taken all the responsibility off my shoulders."

* * * *

"Have you had any drought this season?"

"Oh shucks! We don't have to worry about droughts no more."

"You don't?"

"Nope. The Brain Trust takes care of that. Whenever there's been a dry spell and we need rain I just phone the local political leader and he telephones Roosevelt. Roosevelt tells the Brain Trust and we get rain right smartly. Those Brain Trusters don't take no nonsense from the weather."

* * * *

"Shucks! I don't worry about the mortgage no more. Uncle Sam looks after that. I don't even know what the mortgage is. Some day when the Government men are around I'll ask 'em just for fun."

What is troubling me, and a matter on which I am anxiously awaiting enlightenment, is this: Are Major's fleas—and all dogs, "however watched and tended," have some fleas—"the First Fleas of the Land?" GEORGE HORTON.

Doesn't Think Congress Knows Anything About Income Tax Matters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The country is informed that the Committee on Ways and Means has gone into a huddle to work out a way to reform the internal revenue law. Of course these gentlemen can not bring more out of the huddle than they take into it, and recent disclosures demonstrate that Congress is not conscious of what goes on in the inside works of the income tax administration. The congressional tax men and their experts have never comprehended the distinction between personal incomes, business revenues, and capital increments. And this goes for the father of the income tax and for his successors, whose 20 years of assiduity have brought on the present internal revenue fiasco.

Reserve Army Officers Begin C. M. T. C. Duty

61 in Third Corps Area Are Assigned to Assist in Camp Training.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, July 9—With regular Army garrisons drained to a large extent of officer personnel by demands of the Civilian Conservation Corps, organized reserve units will bear a correspondingly heavier share in the operation of Citizens Military Training Camps in the Third Corps Area this year.

Sixty-one reserve officers of the line and Medical Corps as the first contingent to assist in the conduct of the six C. M. T. camps reported today in preparation for camp openings on Tuesday.

On July 23 a second contingent of reservists will relieve the first with the few regular officers available continuing in key post executive positions. Reservists ordered to duty with the C. M. T. C. will be counted against the total number for which funds are made available for reserve training this year.

Final acceptance for enrollment in the six C. M. T. camps which open Tuesday in the Third Corps Area indicate an attendance of 1,650 students, for which funds are provided this year. Owing to heavy curtailment in funds, enrollment was restricted to blue and white course students who attended camps last year and a limited number of red, or second year candidates. Young Mathewson Has Leg Amputated

Pitcher's Son, Who Lost Bride in Crash, Coming to Walter Reed.

Shanghai, July 9 (A.P.).—Lieut. Christy Mathewson, jr., son of the famous baseball pitcher, who was gravely injured last January 8 in an airplane crash in which his bride was killed, has had his left leg amputated above the knee, it was learned today.

The amputation was made necessary by the failure of an infection and compound fracture to heal. For the past six months Mathewson has waged a courageous battle to survive his injury, undergoing several major operations. Following the amputation of his leg, however, his progress has been marked.

The flier's mother, who was in Shanghai at the time of the accident, is planning to take her son to America July 22 aboard the steamer President Hoover, arriving in San Francisco, August 7. From there they will go to Washington where the flier will enter Walter Reed Hospital for further treatment.

Red Plot Revealed At Buenos Aires

Buenos Aires, July 9 (A.P.).—Police expressed the belief today they had discovered a subversive plot designed to disturb public order.

Although official information was lacking it was learned reliably that the alleged plot was connected with the finding July 6 in a house in suburban Palermo of 1,200 bottles containing materials for the manufacture of incendiary bombs.

Police arrested several extremists, including Emilio Duprat, who they believd acted under orders of former Gen. Severo Toranzo; former Lieut. Col. Segundo Pomar and other noted Yrigoyenist radicals.

Prince Georges and Anne Arundel to Urge Paving of Short Laurel-Fort Meade Road

Mayor Will Head Group Carrying Petition to Commission.

Almost Impassable Link; Work Seen as Aid to Congestion.

Renewing a 15-year-old fight for the building of the Laurel-Fort Meade road as a connecting link between eastern and western Maryland, citizens of Prince Georges and Anne Arundel counties will form a delegation to lay the petition before the State roads commission this week.

Thoroughly aroused over the failure of officials of the State and Anne Arundel County to adhere to the improvement of so important a road, the citizenry, including officials of Laurel and Prince Georges County, will demand a "showdown," it was declared.

The road, only 6 miles in length, has become almost impassable in places, which, to a great extent, isolates the entire Fort Meade sector from Washington, it was pointed out by O. W. Phair, county commissioner. In this isolated section is located the District Training School.

Repairing Also Needed.

"Only 4 miles of this road would have to be paved," Mr. Phair continued. "The remaining 2 miles would need only a repairing of the present paving. Although Prince Georges County contains only a short length, we would jump at the opportunity to improve our section if the State, or Anne Arundel County, could see the importance of paving the remaining section."

Besides being a connecting link between the two extremities of the State, Mayor J. H. Fetty, of Laurel, who will head the delegation to Baltimore, declared the new artery would relieve the traffic congestion on both the Washington-Baltimore boulevard and the Annapolis road.

Traffic coming in from the west would be diverted from Ridgeville through Olney and Laurel, to the General's highway, recently completed from Glenburnie to Camp Parole.

Fort Meade troops, which are constantly being moved through Washington, it was pointed out by John Gray, of Laurel, another prominent citizen in the road-building fight, are now being moved by way of Jessup and Waterloo. This is more than 10 miles farther.

Gravel Improvement Made.

The fight for the road began even before the erection of the huge Army cantonment at the outbreak of the World War. During the war the Government improved the stretch with thousands of tons of gravel, and it is understood that paving by the Government was contemplated when the war closed.

Since the signing of the armistice petitions have been taken to the War Department, asking that the Government build the highway. Refusals have been made on the grounds that it would incur similar petitions for post roads throughout the country.

Anne Arundel County, upon whom the burden would rightly fall, it is charged, fails to heed requests for action because this extreme section of the county is already well connected with Baltimore and Eastern communities.

Petty Jealousies Alleged.

This attitude, Prince Georges County officials believe, led to petty jealousies over the subject and further hindered the progress. It also is rumored that Maryland contractors have been secretly fighting the project, believing that if the road were opened Washington contractors would have easy access to this section and underbid Baltimore on building materials.

It is possible for the State to build the road, and it is on this possibility that the promoters of the project are now working. It also is possible for the funds to be appropriated from the Government's public works fund.

If completed, the road would connect directly with the recently finished pavement from Fort Meade, through Odenton, to the General's highway. Bridges and culverts for the highway have already been built on the Army reservation.

2,579 Veterans Go To Forest Camps

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, July 9.—Enrollment of veterans in the Civilian Conservation Corps from the Third Corps Area has closed with reports at corps area headquarters today showing 2,579 sent to the conditioning camp at Fort George G. Meade.

Reports from recruiting stations show 833 out of 3,600 veterans certified by the Veterans' Administration failed to report, and 188 were turned down on preliminary examination.

Included in the shipment to Fort Meade were 36 certified direct by the Veterans' Administration in Washington as enrolled at large and not charged against the corps area quota of 2,875. Maryland was the only State in the corps area to complete its quota, sending 325 to the conditioning camp. Shortages from the other subdivisions were as follows: Pennsylvania, 150; Virginia, 145; District of Columbia, 1; a total shortage of 296.

Easterwood to Pay Dues for King, Duce

Colonel Acts When Legion Turns Down Honorary Memberships.

Rome, July 9 (A.P.).—Col. W. E. Easterwood, jr., said today he would pay the dues of King Victor Emmanuel and Premier Mussolini for the life memberships in the John W. Lowe Post of the American Legion, at Dallas, Tex., which he said he conferred upon them last week.

He made the statement after reading cables from legion authorities in Indianapolis that they could not be honorary members.

Colonel Easterwood left tonight for Athens to inspect the legionnaires there, and said he still was determined to bring the matter before the legion's national convention in Chicago next October.

A. W. Loew Is Injured In Airplane Accident

New York, July 9 (A.P.).—A. W. Loew, 35, son of the late Marcus Loew, theater owner, was slightly injured today when the motor of his monoplane stalled 30 feet in the air and nosed over on the ground.

The plane was demolished, but Mr. Loew was only cut and bruised. He was taken to a hospital, however, to remain overnight.

Auto Makers Are Expected To Pay for U. S. Research

Industry, One of Largest Users of Government Services in Past, Believed Likely to Assent to Proposed Fee System.

By William Ullman.

One of the largest users of Government services, the automobile industry, in common with others, is confronted with the possibility that it soon may begin receiving bills from Washington. This prospect inheres in the proposal to put a number of research and other functions which Federal agencies have been perfoming for private industry on a fee basis.

The automobile industry's reaction to it is of particular interest here because of the extent to which it has made use of Government services in all phases of its operations. Moreover, its attitude toward the proposed fee system is counted upon to reflect the intelligent broad-mindedness which, in Washington's opinion, has characterized its management for some time. In other words, it is doubted that the industry will allow any valuable services to be abandoned in preference to supporting them out of its own coffers.

The Government's proposal of the fee system is a direct result of the clamor for economy in its operations. In meeting this demand it sees two possible courses open to it. One is to curtail drastically, or eliminate altogether, services performed for particular industrial and business groups. When that is proposed, however, beneficiaries of these Federal functions object. That leaves the Government but one recourse, namely, the continued performance of the function but the assessment of its cost against the group benefited rather than the general taxpayer.

The executive mood of Washington at the moment is to leave the choice of the services to be continued and the means of defraying their cost directly up to industry and business. In his session with those industrial, business and financial leaders, who constitute the membership of the Business Advisory and Planning Council, Secretary Roper explicitly invited the group to participate in the reorganization of the Department of Commerce on the basis sketched above.

The United States Bureau of Standards, the automotive division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, and the Census Bureau are three Federal agencies which have performed vital services for the automobile industry for years. Technical research of the former and market and distribution studies of the latter two, both at home and abroad, have been utilized to a large extent by the motor makers.

Many illustrations of the advantage of this form of research to the industry can be cited. A typical one is that relating to the important study made last year by Bureau of Standards physicists and engineers of gasoline vapor lock. Virtually every make of passenger car suffered from this study, a tendency of engines to stall and fall off in power due to lockage of the fuel line by boiling of the gasoline.

The phenomenon was studied and solved and every passenger car manufacturer is making use of the Federal experts' findings in this year's models. The cost of the research was something less than $12,000, far smaller than would have been the case had each factory been required to assign scientific personnel to, and design special equipment for, the project.

Much the same economy of procedure attaches to the collection of market facts by dispassionate Government agencies. These data are required and used by all manufacturers, yet their collection is far less expensive by the existing process than if each factory were forced to set up its own market survey agencies in this country and abroad.

So successful has been the automobile industry's experience as a customer of the Federal establishment that it is expected to continue as a large patron, even on a fee basis.

A proposal placed in the hopper of the industrial recovery machine may come out at the other end of a finished product of personal financial interest to millions of automobile owners. Its originator is the National Automobile Dealers Association, and it has to do with the buying and selling of used cars. It is a part, needless to say, of the proposed trade code for motor car retailers.

The idea is that dealers shall fix used car prices, that a single, standard price offer shall be made by retailers for all used vehicles presented in trade. It is expected to halt the practice of new car buyers known as shopping around, a procedure indulged with the object of getting one dealer to boost the amount offered by another for the traded vehicle. The practice which had its origin in the willingness of dealers to "horse-trade," long has been isolated as the germ of the used car problem.

If the suggestion is approved in Washington, shopping around with a used car will be halted and, leading dealers think, so will disappear the old and costly problem.

* * * *

There is good news for motor car service station, repair shop and garage employes in the trade code proposed for the retail automobile field. They are to get a 5 per cent wage increase at once, together with a 40-hour week.

As to sales and executive personnel, the same rate of wage increase will apply to all except those working on commissions. The proposed code, however, puts no limit on the number of hours the white collar employes may work.

G. O. P. Leaders Chicago-Bound To Plan Drive

(Associated Press.)

Chieftains of the Republican party are preparing quietly for a major drive aimed at regaining in 1934 some of the lost G. O. P. power in Congress, and leaders in the midwestern States yesterday turned toward Chicago for another of a series of conferences over the approaching congressional campaign.

This gathering, to be held tomorrow under the leadership of Everett Sanders, chairman of the Republican national committee, will find party spokesmen from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa reporting on the political situation in their States and the prospects for success a year hence.

Regional meetings have been held previously in Washington, New York and Boston, marking the only outward show of Republican activity in the "political dogdays." Behind the scenes, however, there have been many other quiet discussions of party plans.

Issues Are Formulated.

Issues for the 1934 congressional campaign and the 1936 Presidential election now are being drawn, based in large part upon the Roosevelt emergency legislation. Predictions have come from some of the leaders that the Republicans will make sizeable gains in seats in the House of Representatives.

At present the Republican national committee is maintaining only a skeleton force. Nevertheless, Chairman Sanders is spending most of his time in his office and is keeping in close contact with State leaders.

A few blocks away from the national committee headquarters are the offices of the Republican Federal Associates, of which Ogden L. Mills, Secretary of the Treasury under President Hoover and a chief champaign speaker of 1932, is chairman.

Roosevelt Record Compiled.

Unostentatiously the associates have been compiling the record of the Roosevelt administration and shaping the issues for the coming campaigns. Twice a month the executive committee of this group, composed of Mills, Walter F. Brown, Postmaster General in the last administration; Walter E. Hope, William P. Castle, jr., and John Richardson, meets either here or in New York. Arch Coleman, general secretary, and W. Irving Glover, director of organization, also have taken part in these meetings.

The associates say their present purpose is to keep the party alive and to present a national viewpoint for local leaders. They intend to take part in the 1934 congressional race.

Presidential Outlook.

Representative Snell, of New York, minority leader of the House, already has stepped to the firing line for the Republicans. He has had an exchange with Postmaster General Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee, as well as House and Senate Democratic leaders, and friends predicted there would be others before the summer ends.

Observers here look for considerable Republican activity to come into the open next January when Congress meets, with the party then offering more opposition to Democratic proposals.

Little is being said, meanwhile, about the Republican candidate for President in 1936. When the subject is mentioned the names of Herbert Hoover, Mills, Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania; Representative Wadsworth, of New York, and Snell are brought into the discussion. But the discussions thus far have little more than touched the surface.

2 Die in $100,000 Blaze in Kentucky

Williamsburg, Ky., July 9 (A.P.). The body of Siler Perkins, 30, was found today at the back end of the Wender Department Store, scene of an explosion and fire yesterday which caused $100,000 damage before being brought under control.

Boys playing in the ruins saw some clothing under a pile of brick, summoned officers, and the body was removed. The death toll was increased to two, as Leon Humpfleet, 20, was killed by falling bricks yesterday while aiding in removing goods from the building.

Perkins was a brother-in-law of John Wender, general manager of the Wender Department Store, which occupied the lower floor of the building in which the explosion occurred. The second floor served as the National Guard Armory. Wender married Perkins' sister.

Reunion Set for September 2.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., July 9 (Special).—The annual Fearnow family reunion, which draws one of the largest gatherings of its kind in this section, will be held September 2, it is announced. The date will commerate the 173rd anniversary of the birth of John Fearnow, head of the family of that name, who settled in this county.

Hunt Resumed For Victims of Canyon Deluge

3 Bodies Are Found After Cloudburst; Two More Believed Drowned.

Denver, July 9 (A.P.).—Threats of new floods abated and the search for two bodies, believed buried in the debris left behind by high water in Bear Creek Canyon, was resumed today.

Three bodies have been recovered and identified. The victims were G. E. (Jack) Burton, a lunch stand operator at Idledale; Leonard Conde, 14; and Mrs. Sylvia Soderman, 33, both of Denver. All were caught on the highway by a wall of water which swept Bear Creek following a cloudburst Friday.

In addition Leonard Conde's brother, Raymond, 13 years old, and Mrs. Soderman's daughter, Eunice, four, were believed to have drowned.

Although another wall of water swept down the 18 mile long canyon late yesterday following a cloudburst, those in its path fled to the mountainsides and no injuries or deaths were reported. Little additional damage was done, officials said.

Charles D. Vail, State highway engineer, said rebuilding of four miles of the Bear Creek Canyon highway swept aways by Friday's storm would cost about $100,000.

Officials at Morrison and Idledale estimated approximately $250,000 damage was caused by the storm. Several cabins were swept away and a number of motor cars were buried in silt.

Thwarted in Love, Youth Kills Self

Los Angeles, July 9 (A.P.).—Ending his life by inhaling carbon monoxide fumes, Arnold R. Diffenbach, 26-year-old secretary to Karl Thalhammer, an inventor, today left a note saying he had decided to commit suicide because the girl he loved, Jennie Martin, 20, had returned to her home in Tuscaloosa, Ala., to marry her childhood sweetheart.

The note said the girl left Los Angeles with the expressed intention of marrying Dr. Earl Arno, of Milwaukee. She had been working as a clerk in the hotel where Diffenbaugh lived.

Clasped to the youth's breast was the girl's photograph, inscribed, "To Arnold, Lest You Forget I Yove You—Jennie." The note apparently was written after he had started the motor pumping the fumes into his car.

Province May Take Over Rail Project

Santiago, Chile, July 9 (A.P.).—The government of Antofagasta Province is planning to take over immediately construction of the proposed Northern Transandine Railroad. The move is the result of a decision that the contractors who hold the concession, Cereceda Garcia Co., are unable to fulfill their promises.

The government has financed and actually taken charge of the preliminary work, so that little change will be necessary. The 3,000-peso guarantee to the firm will be revoked.

Preliminary work has been slow with only several hundred men working, but it is expected that more funds will be available shortly.

Radio Dial Flashes

By Robert D. Heinl.

THE successive arrivals of Gen. Italo Balbo and his armada of 24 seaplanes at Montreal, Chicago and New York will be described over both networks.

Canada will play host to the Italian air minister and his flying colleagues before the squadron reaches the United States, for Montreal is in direct line between Chicago and Labrador, where Balbo is leading his squadron in delayed stages from Rome by way of Iceland. The broadcast from Montreal will be made possible through the courtesy and cooperation of the Canadian Radio Commission.

Since the seaplanes are equipped only with wireless telegraph apparatus, telephonic contact with the squadron is precluded. However, WOR, Newark, is investigating the practicability of a broadcast description of the flight from a plane when the squadron comes within broadcasting range.

Every unit in the aerocade can communicate with the others at all times. The perfection to which wireless contract has been carried out is established in the fact that conversation was exchanged between Long Island and the fleet on the water of Lake Orbetello, Italy, before it left.

Ferde Grofe's composition, "Tabloid," a modernistic musical treatment of a tab newspaper in the making, will be featured on the two-hour Paul Whiteman program tonight from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. over the WEAF network (but not WRC). This piece has for its setting a metropolitan newspaper office. The rumble of giant presses and the brittle tapping of typewriters form a part of the background.

THOMAS P. LITTLEPAGE, president of the Chamber of Commerce, will urge listeners to "Buy in Washington" over WOL at 6:45 o'clock tonight.

This brings to mind an incident early in his career in connection with the late President Theodore Roosevelt. Mr. Littlepage was employed in the Bureau of Corporations and lived in Brookland. Rhode Island avenue was not then improved that far out; in fact it was largely woods.

One morning as Littlepage was walking down to the car-line he was startled by a crash in the timber and to his amazement bounding out almost on top of him was President Roosevelt. Nevertheless Mr. Littlepage instantly recognized him and said "Good Morning, Mr. President."

The latter replied "Good Morning" and then quickly added, showing his teeth and almost with boyish glee," I suppose you wonder why I have made such an entrance as this, but I've just given my Secret Service men the slip.

"When I want to get a good workout they cling to my heels but this time I've fooled them. They are in that woods somewhere looking for me."

The President then inquired as to the best way to get back to the White House, also as to the identity of his newly found guide. Upon learning that he was employed in the Bureau of Corporations he asked him specifically about a study which that bureau was making of the tobacco situation and the "night riders," which were giving considerable trouble at that time. It so happened that Mr. Littlepage was in charge of the investigation and could tell him everything he wanted to know.

A day or so later the young man was summoned to the office of James R. Garfield, son of the former President, and chief of the Corporations Bureau. Thinking he had probably talked too much to President Roosevelt and sensing a "call-down," Mr. Littlepage responded with some apprehension.

However, his fears were quickly allayed when Mr. Garfield said: "President Roosevelt has told me about his meeting with you. He was very much impressed with your knowledge of the 'night rider' situation and thinks you are the very man for us to send down there to look into it."

Thus began a highly successful career.

APPARENTLY Al Jolson, who was not happily cast in his previous broadcasts, staged a comeback in his performance with Paul Whiteman's orchestra on the first two-hour radio commercial air show which made its debut recently. Following the performance he received a telegram from John S. Royal, vice president of the National Broadcasting Co., in charge of programs, which read as follows:

The next day Al received a letter from M. H. Aylesworth, the president of the N. B. C., which read:

Dear Al: I was very proud of you last night and without question you did the greatest job you ever did on the radio and one of the greatest performances I ever heard.

"Naturally I was very pleased and want you to know that I am happy about it."

Hollywood on the Air, when it is heard over WRC network at 11 o'clock tonight, will bring to the radio audience as special guest artists two personalities well known to the radio and theatrical worlds of Europe—Frederick Hollaender, composer, and Greta Keller, radio singer of the continent. In addition, Louisa May Alcott's "Little Women," now being screened, will be discussed by Kenneth MacGowan, producer.

FORTY-FOUR years ago today there was born in Washington quite a radio celebrity in Washington. It was none other than Graham McNamee.

Does any one reading these lines remember him when he was here?

There seems to be some uncertainty as to whether or not Sherlock Holmes will resume. A date for its beginning, however, has been set for late in September.

Weekly meetings of the Advertising Club of Washington will be broadcast by WRC beginning next Tuesday, from 1 to 1:30.

"The Renovize Washington Exposition" will be further explained by Alfred L. Stern, its director (WMAL, 8 p. m.).

Baron Munchausen, in his farewell appearance for the season, said the new beer is "circus beer," explaining that it had three and two jents.

The jubilee programs, featuring the Travellers Quartet, Dolph Martin's orchestra and "Mortimer," as master of ceremonies, have been renewed and will continue to be heard over WJSV on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 6:30 p. m., for the next 52 weeks.

HENDRIK WILLEM VAN LOON, geographer, will be the voice in "America's Grub Street Speaks," at 4:45 p. m., WJSV.

Although Van Loon gets around quite a bit, the title of his talk will be "Traveling by Armchair." Oldtimers recall when he was in the Associated Press in Washington and later in Baltimore with the Sun.

Arthur Brisbane uses a special typewriter for writing his broadcasting manuscript and the type is so large that members of Al Goodman's orchestra, seated behind him, could read every word of the manuscript as he turned the pages.

Just to show he could still "take it"—as well as to collect sundry and divers wagers—WLW's tenor, Eddie Albert, climbed the new 831-foot Crosley antenna tower in Cincinnati last week. Eddie expects to be up and around again within a few days.

Storekeepers worry about cash registers when they don't ring often enough. It's different with the director of the Musical Grocery Store. His worry is that the cash register used in the act rings almost continuously during rehearsals. They just won't leave the thing alone!

"Kathleen Mavourneen" will be the offering of the Radio Guild (WMAL, 3 p. m.).

A BARN dance medley composed of old-time New England melodies will open the broadcast of Andre Kostelanetz over WJSV at 9:30 p. m. Other orchestral features will include special arrangements of "Only a Rose" and "Tulip Time."

Evan Evans, barytone, and Mary Eastman, soprano, will be soloists on the broadcast.

"Czardas Hongroise," a composition by Harry Horlick, leader of the Gypsies, will be featured over WRC at 8 p. m. Frank Parker, tenor, will have "Play, Fiddle, Play," as one of his solo numbers, while the orchestra will include "Trouble in Paradise," "Havana Tango" and "Gypsy Serenade." The program will originate at the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition.

DEAR READER—
Here's another foolish comic strip to add to the millions you have to read to the kids.
If you think that's tough on you, consider me. I've got to draw it!
I can't promise you the stuff will always be funny but at any event it won't be tragic. Brickbats and misery are out in this strip. Also there'll be little conversation. I hate lettering.
I forgot to tell you—that's UNCLE ELBY with the umbrella in the first picture. When he gets the dog turned around I'll introduce you to NAPOLEON.
Well this is the kind of predicament you get in when you start a comic strip before you have your characters under control. I'll introduce Napoleon tomorrow. Clifford McBride

Miss Ponselle Will Challenge Italy's Premier

Opera Singer Is Opposed to Mussolini's Restrictions Against Women.

By Harold Stone.

Next year Carmela Ponselle, fiery Metropolitan Opera prima donna, will return to her native Italy and fling a challenge in the face of Premier Mussolini, she said, in an exclusive interview yesterday. Miss Ponselle had just placed a wreath upon the statue of the women pioneers in the crypt of the Capitol as a part of the national memorial services to women sponsored by the National Woman's Party.

Miss Ponselle said she would combine with her concert tour of her native land the sponsorship of the cause of women suffrage in Italy. Heretofore the Italian government has frowned upon any movement to equalize the sexes, she said.

"The premier is wrong in his attitude toward women," Miss Ponselle said. "There are many brilliant minds among the women of Italy. All they need is the opportunity to demonstrate their ability. The premier thinks that all women are useful for is to do housework and raise families. I believe in large families, and I believe in a woman's being domestic, but I do not believe that this should keep her from taking a vital interest in other things.

Ran Away From Italy.

"When I came to America I was but 16 years old. I ran away from Italy because my father wanted me to marry a neighbor boy and settle down to the regular routine of Italian family life. Where would I have been now, had I not had the vision to see the opportunities offered by this glorious country. I wanted to study and to learn to sing. I realized the opportunity my sister, Rosa, had here and was anxious to get her away from the tradition and environment of our home.

"How I worked those first years here no one but myself will ever know. But look what we both have accomplished. Had it not been for the broad American view of equality for the sexes we would never have had the privileges we now enjoy. I want my own people—the women of Italy to have the same opportunity in their own country. It may mean hectic days and persecution—it may mean even my life to go against the eicts of the powers that be in Italy, but I do not care. In America you had your pioneer women. I shall be happy to be a pioneer of this cause in Italy."

Meanwhile, while on her tour of the concert stage here in America, Miss Ponselle will aid the National Woman's Party in furthering the cause of women in this country. Present in the Capitol crypt yesterday, as Miss Ponselle placed the wreath upon the statue of the pioneer women, were officers of the industrial women's unions of New York, in Washington to aid the Woman's Party campaign for economic equality.

Urges United Stand.

In laying the wreath, Miss Ponselle said: "All women who are supporting themselves must stand together. What they need for success is freedom to control their lives, nothing that is restricted is strong. It thrills me to be a part of this great woman's movement."

During the Capitol ceremonies Mrs. Florence Bayard Hilles, chairman of the National Woman's Party, read a resolution adopted during the memorial services which have been held since last Saturday, calling upon President Roosevelt "to end the present wholesale dismissals of women from Government service; to end the continued discriminations against married women in the Government service; to remove the present artificial handicaps placed upon women wage earners by special legislation as to hours, night work and wages applying only to women and not to their male competitors; and in particular to aid the proposed amendment to the National Constitution guaranteeing to women equal rights with men, so that in the future women may have equal protection with men in the hard struggle for existence."

Foreclosures Hit By State Official

New York, July 9 (A.P.).—In a letter addressed to the 40 title and guaranty mortgage companies under his jurisdiction, George S. Van Schaick, State superintendent of insurance, has asked them to refrain from "harsh and unreasonable" foreclosure actions.

Superintendent Van Schaick, in making public the letter tonight, said it is "not only humane, but in accord with good business to extend time to trustworthy debtors who are temporarily embarrassed."

At the same time he made it clear that it is the duty of mortgage companies to preserve the security behind the obligations guaranteed by them and said it was "undoubtedly true that many mortgagors who are well able to fulfill their obligations are taking advantage of present conditions to avoid them."

Prison Tragedy Blamed in Death

Columbus, Ohio, July 9 (A.P.). The strain of caring for the dead and injured in the 1930 Easter Monday fire at the Ohio State Penitentiary here was blamed for the death today of the Rev. Father Albert O'Brien, Catholic chaplain at the prison for seven years.

He had been in poor health since the prison tragedy. On June 28, he was stricken at Cincinnati while enroute from Memphis, Tenn., to Columbus. He was taken to Good Samaritan Hospital at Cincinnati, where he died today.

A native of Emly, Tipperary County, Ireland, Father O'Brien attended Catholic University, Washington, D. C., in 1905 and completed his theological studies at St. Joseph's Priory, Somerset, Ohio. Ordained to the priesthood, he served as a missionary in Colorado, Kentucky and New Jersey before coming to Ohio penitentiary as chaplain in 1926.

$600,000,000 Road Work to Aid Purchasing

States Are Hastening Plans as Big Measure in Recovery.

Chicago, July 9 (A.P.).—About $600,000,000 is being poured into industrial and labor coffers by the States and Federal Government joining in a gigantic highway construction program to spread employment and to increase purchasing power.

The Government has made available to the States $400,000,000 for construction of roads in the Federal-aid highway system and on secondary roads. The States will add about $200,000,000 to that sum, a survey showed today.

Half a dozen States, including South Carolina, Louisiana, North Dakota, Alabama, Wisconsin and Oklahoma, will spend no money for roads except the Federal funds allotted to them. Unbalanced budgets or highway department deficits were principal causes of their decisions.

But Missouri will spend $40,000,000, Illinois about $88,000,000 and Texas about $19,000,000, as their share of the vast movement to increase the purchasing power of those who lay concrete ribbons across the land.

The Government will add $12,000,000 to Missouri's expenditures, $17,500,000 to those of Illinois and $24,000,000 to those of Texas. It will give New York $22,300,000, Pennsylvania $18,800,000, California $15,600,000 and Michigan $12,700,000, among the largest sums.

West Virginia, Nebraska, Iowa, Massachusetts and California do not know how much they will spend for highways during the coming year because of pending legislation, funds frozen in closed banks, reorganizations of highway departments and new budget systems. These States however will spend various Federal sums on their roads.

Other States will spend the following sums, both State and Federal allottments being included:

New Jersey, uncertain because of road board reorganization, estimated at $9,000,000, plus about $6,000,000 Federal money; Florida, $12,000,000; Kentucky, $17,750,000; Ohio, $26,000,000; Minnesota, $4,000,000 left of 1932 program, plus $10,500,000 Federal money.

North Dakota, $6,100,000, all Federal; Delaware, $2,300,000; New Hampshire, $8,300,000; Wisconsin, $5,000,000 through city and county shares of gas taxes, no State money, $9,700,000 Federal money; Georgia, $18,500,000; Tennessee, $200,000 for construction, $3,000,000 for maintenance, all State funds, plus $3,800,000 Federal.

Arkansas, $9,750,000; Mississippi, $7,400,000; Maryland, $7,500,000; Virginia, $21,000,000; Michigan, $16,000,000; Maine, $10,700,000; Indiana, $15,000,000; Idaho, $6,250,000; Washington, $18,656,000; Arizona, $8,600,000.

Kansas, $13,750,000; Wyoming, $6,250,000; New Mexico, $6,860,000; Colorado, $9,000,000; Oregon, $14,000,000; Montana, $8,700,000; Utah, $6,000,000.

League's Narcotic Treaty Extolled

New York, July 9 (A.P.).—The League of Nations treaty convention restricting the manufacture of narcotic drugs, which went into effect throughout the world today, was extolled here by speakers of the World Narcotic Defense Association.

Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson, president of the association, said the convention placed in operation "the majestic power of law of the civilized world to strike down the illicit narcotic drug traffic—modern pirates who are preying on all mankind."

Representative Hamilton Fish read a telegram from President Roosevelt which said: "Please accept my best wishes for the success of your celebration of the coming into effect of the Geneva treaty convention limiting the manufacture of narcotic drugs to legitimate needs. All those who participated in bringing this about are to be congratulated on their wonderful achievement."

Federal Funds Are Requested For St. Marys

County Submits List of Projects Desired Under Recovery Act.

Special to The Washington Post.

Leonardtown, Md., July 9.—St. Marys County is asking, through the Leonardtown Commissioners, St. Marys County Commissioners and the County Board of Education that a list of projects be built here under the Federal recovery act. This list has been sent to Representative Stephen W. Gambrill, of the Fifth Congressional District, to be presented to the recovery committee.

The Leonardtown Commissioners urge building of a new postoffice, a municipal wharf and dredging of the Brettons Bay Harbor. They also want a new sewerage system and disposal plant. The sewerage is now turned into Brettons Bay.

The county commissioners have asked for a State road at Piney Point to the Government Lighthouse. State Senator J. Allen Goad advocates dredging at Point Lookout for a safe harbor for small boats.

The county board of education is asking for two new rooms and an auditorium at the Great Mills High School, two new rooms at the Margaret Brent High School, and $30,000 for a new six-room school in Leonardtown.

Renovize Home Opens Tonight For Inspection

Display at 1435 K Street Also Will Be Ready for Public to View.

The little house at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest which was converted from an unlivable shack to a cottage with all modern improvements through efforts of the Renovize Washington Campaign will be opened for display tonight in conjunction with the opening of the Renovize Exposition at 1435 K street northwest.

Designed to stimulate home improvement work and thus relieve unemployment and aid business generally, the campaign will reach its peak during the next two weeks.

Leaders are confident that, with a $500,000 loan pool available to home owners, and cost of building materials remaining at a comparatively low level, decided activity in renovizing work will be shown in the next few weeks. The fund for property improvement was created by the District Bankers Association before the bank moratorium, and those banks which are functioning are prepared to lend money on adequate indorsement.

The display of building equipment and modern home appliances at 1435 K street is expected to lend added stimulus to the renovizing movement. Many new ideas in property improvement will be advanced, and architects and professional men will be on hand to advise potential renovizers. Admission to the display will be free. The doors will open at 7 p. m. Hours thereafter will be 2 to 5 p. m. and 7 to 9:30 p. m.

Value of Truth Emphasized in Talk by Pastor

Dr. Albert Evans' Sermon Deals With "Ministry of Holy Spirit."

"Truth is an infinite quantity," said Dr. Albert Evans, associate pastor, preaching yesterday morning at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

"No single star holds all the light, no single flower is endowed with all the beauty or has a corner on all the perfume. So no individual man knows all things, except the Son of Man, who is the Son of God, who is the author of all things in whom the truth concerning all things centers. He will guide you into all truth."

Dr. Evans preached on "The Ministry of the Holy Spirit." He said in part:

"The Master has announced to the disciples his approaching departure. Lest they be overmuch depressed by the thought of their separation from their Lord, He declares, 'it is expedient for you that I go away.'

"He Will Glorify Me."

"'In my absence the Father will send another Comforter, even the spirit of truth. When He is come He will be your strength and guide. He will not speak of Himself. He will glorify Me, as the sun glorifies the earth, as the heavens declare the glory of God.'

"The sun does not change the landscape. The mountains and the sea are as high and wide as before. The sun adds nothing to the acreage of the meadows or to the stature of the rocks, but how wonderful all is in its light. Such is the ministry of the spirit. The spirit glorifies Christ, reveals the beauty of his character. By this spiritual light we see every day a larger, grander, tenderer Christ, a new music in his speech, an ampler sufficiency in His grace, a deeper humiliation in His cradle, a more profound agony in His cross, a brighter role of light in his resurrection and ascension, a newly transfigured Christ. The spirit will not speak of himself. 'He shall glorify Me,' said the Master.

Guide to All Truth.

"But more than that, He will guide you into all truth. He will lead you into all truth as it centers in Jesus Christ, who declared, 'I am the way, the truth and the life.'

"Again the ministry of the spirit will reestablish our fellowship and companionship with Christ. Jesus assures them that that companionship will now be more real and permanent than ever before.

"Finally, He will show you things to come; not only guidance and companionship for the present, but hope and assurance for the future. Jesus said, 'I will come again and receive you into myself.' The ministry of the spirit confirms the promise.

"'Eye hath not seen,' saith the Apostle Paul, nor heard, neither hath it gathered into the heart of man the things which you have prepared for them that love Him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his spirit.

"Now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we should be, but we know that when He shall appear we shall be with Him."

Bank Fraud Trial Of Two Scheduled

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., July 9.—William G. Hardy, former vice president and cashier of the Shenandoah Valley National Bank of Winchester, and his son-in-law, Beverley B. Wright, also of Winchester, will go to trial at the December term of the United States District Court, at Harrisonburg, on indictments alleging misappropriation of funds of the bank, attorneys interested in the case were advised here today.

At the regular Federal grand jury in Roanoke this past week, Hardy was indicted for misapplying and converting to his own use various sums of money belonging to the bank in a total amount of $7,951.52. Wright was indicted for obtaining $13,000 from the bank on the grounds that he aided and abetted Hardy, the latter having loaned the money to Wright.

Hardy is free on $10,000 bond and Wright gained his release on $5,000 bond. Hardy is understood to have engaged Attorney Harry R. Kern, of Winchester.

Bread Price in Boston Is Increased Sharply

Boston, July 9 (U.P.).—A jump in the price of bread was announced today by the New England Bakers Association, due, it was said, to an increase in the price of wheat and a new Government tax on wheat milled into flour.

Twenty-ounce loaves of bread, formerly 6 cents, will cost 10 cents tomorrow, it was announced, and 12-ounce loaves which have been selling at 5 cents will be replaced by 14-ounce loaves for 7 cents.

Water "Hitch-Hiking" Arrests Are Ordered

Seattle, July 9 (A.P.).—Water "hitch-hiking" on log booms through the Lake Washington Ship Canal has become a problem.

Therefore, following complaints from towboat operators, acting Port Warden Paul Sweeney ordered patrol boats to follow the tows and arrest any swimmers boarding them.

Retired Businessman Drowns in Maryland

Special to The Washington Post.

Johnson Lauds Those Aiding in Writing of Code

(Associated Press.)

Hugh S. Johnson, industrial administrator, made the following statement last night on the promulgation of the cotton textile code:

"After the President's statement on signing the textile code there is nothing more to be said except to thank the men who did most to make it possible and this I am directed by the President and in his name to do.

"In the industry, Mr. George A. Sloan, Mr. Nelson Slater and Mr. R. T. Stevens have worked for months on this job and while they had the active support of all the leaders they have devoted their days and nights for weeks to attain this end.

"For the administration, Mr. Alexander Sachs, whose analyses have largely governed our conclusions, and Mr. William H. Allen, who conducted the hearings, are entitled to the whole credit for an able and tactful conduct of negotiations and hearings which produced the final results.

"The restraint, understanding and cooperation of both labor and industrial representatives were a marked feature of all the proceedings and the close personal support and advice of the great labor leaders, William Green, John Frey, John L. Lewis, Joseph Franklin, Sidney Hillman, Edward McGrady, Father Haas, and Rose Schneiderman were as constantly with us as were those of such great industrial leaders as Gerard Swope, Edward Hurley, Louis Kirstein, Alfred Sloan, William Vereen, David Coker and Austin Finch. Equally devoted were the services of such scientific men as Leo Wolman, William Ogburn, and the whole consumers group headed by Mrs. C. C. Rumsey.

"This job and all the work of this administration is an education of what teamwork in Government can do.

"This administration has had the constant and active support of the whole Cabinet and while naturally, in view of the subject matter, Secretaries Roper and Perkins have been most active, we have had the aggressive backing of the Attorney General, in the Department of Justice, and Chairman March, of the Federal Trade Commission, and the advice and cooperation of Secretary Ickes and Lewis Douglas.

Drys Denounce Roosevelt Plea Backing Repeal

(Associated Press.)

The national prohibition emergency committee issued a statement late last night calling President Roosevelt's appeal for prohibition repeal "a departure from accepted principles of constitutional government so serious as to cause deep concern to lovers of American liberty."

"So fearful were the framers of the Constitution of just this sort of executive dictation that they provided for constitutional changes to be made by action of Congress and the several States without the sanction of the Chief Executive," the statement said.

"By oath of office, the duty of the President is to 'preserve, protect and defend' the Constitution, not to advocate repeal of its provisions, regardless of his personal opinions on any constitutional question which may be before the country.

"The proposed twenty-first amendment is now before the several States under conditions dictated by the wets. Evidently they fear that they can not win in many of the remaining 32 States on the merits of their case. Therefore, the President has injected his office into the controversy. Millions of American citizens will regret to see the high office of the Presidency made a special pleader for the outlawed liquor traffic.

"The American people may be willing to have their currency debased, but they will not consent to debauch their morals."

6 Die in Auto-Train Crash Near Dayton

Dayton, Ohio, July 9 (A.P.).—Belief that an interurban crossing accident which claimed the lives of six persons late yesterday was "unavoidable" was expressed today by Coroner Waldron Gilmour of Warren County after a preliminary examination.

The accident occurred when a Cincinnati & Lake Erie electric car struck an automobile on the Dixie highway near Franklin. Coroner Gilmour said he would give a report to the county prosecutor tomorrow and if the latter were satisfied, no action would be taken.

Decreased Efficiency Is Held Menace to County Government

Abolition of Fee System in Paying Officers Is Recommended.

University, Va., July 9 (A.P.).—The county government round table of the Virginia Institute of Public Affairs announced today that after a week's deliberations it had concluded that the county is in danger of being abolished unless local self-government increases its efficiency.

The round table, led by George W. Spicer, chairman of the Virginia Commission on County Government, held that "centralization of responsibility" in an executive head is recognized as "a vital necessity in increasing the efficiency of county government."

It held further that county consolidation in certain instances is necessary, recommended abolition of the fee system in paying county officers, and asserted that "adequate performance of the essential social and cultural services of local government is as important in a time of economic adversity as in a period of prosperity."

Conclusions Are Summarized.

The round table reached the following conclusions:

"1. The trend toward State assumption of county functions indicates that the county is breaking down as a local governmental unit. Preservation of local self-government in the county depends upon the county increasing its own efficiency. If this is not done, the county is in danger of being abolished through amputation of its functions.

"2. Centralization of responsibility in an executive head of the county government is recognized as a vital necessity in increasing the efficiency of county government in Virginia and in the perpetuation of the county as an administrative unit. The round table approves the optional forms of county government provided by the last session of the Legislature and urges Virginia counties to give serious consideration to their adoption.

"3. County consolidation in many sections of the Commonwealth is also recognized as a necessity to form counties of sufficient population, area and wealth to support the essential services of local government.

Would Abolish Fee System.

"4. Abolition of the fee system as a method of compensation of county officers is recommended.

"5. Adequate performance of the essential social and cultural services of local government is as important in a time of economic adversity as in a period of prosperity. The necessity for economy is recognized, but it is submitted that this should be effected so far as possible through elimination of waste rather than through blind, indiscriminate slashing of important functions. This latter course is community suicide instead of economy. Attention is directed toward the possibilities for constructive economy through reorganization of local government and the elimination of useless agencies.

"6. We believe that local government furnishes an effective school of citizenship and that upon the quality of local government depends the quality of our citizenship and the quality of State government."

Knight Promises Audits Of All Towns' Accounts

Richmond, Va., July 9 (A.P.).—Charles E. A. Knight, a candidate for election to the General Assembly, said today that if elected he will introduce a bill to provide for the auditing of accounts of every city and incorporated town in Virginia.

He said that both McCarthy Downs, auditor of public accounts, and T. Coleman Andrews, former auditor, had indorsed the idea.

Early Bookings Hint Season of Big Vaudeville

More of 'Jennie Gerhardt,' the Newsreels and Some Gossip of Theater.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Having witnessed a long succession of heavily stressed intervals of screen entertainment, variously denominated "greater movie seasons," "frolics," "festivals," and whatnot, Washington theater-goers now are to be regaled by what might be designated a "parade of personalities and scintillant stars of the speaking stage."

Some elasticity will have to be conceded the term "speaking stage," however, since the "parade" is to be made up, not only of stage luminaries, but of radio and movie topliners as well.

It all comes about through the fact that Louis K. Sidney, overlord of stage production for Loew's, Inc., and what is still known as the Marcus Loew Booking Agency, have combined to assemble an especially noteworthy list of attractions for the stage of Loew's Fox Theater during the remainder of the summer. If you will note, a considerable part of the summer still remains.

This "congress of world attractions" will be put in motion next Friday with the coming to Loew's Fox of the "Teatro dei Piccoli," Vittorio Podrecca's super-marionette show, which a short four months ago played the National Theater as an American Theater Society attraction at the regular midwinter $3 scale of admission charges.

Too much can not be said of the artistic supremacy of this extraordinary offering. It is to the ordinary puppet show about what the Century of Progress Exposition is to Coney Island!

Radio will furnish the stage headliners for the week beginning Friday, July 21, when "Sherlock Holmes," featured on the George Washington Coffee hour, will occupy the stellar niche. Another notable booking for the same week will be Charles Foy & Co.

The "nitwits of the networks," otherwise—or have you guessed it?—George Burns and Gracie Allen, stars of radio, motion pictures and vaudeville, will lend the luster of their inspired lunacy to the stage goings-on at the Fox the week of July 28. It is reported that Gracie expects to find her missing brother in Washington. If he is to be identified by a typical strain of his sister's ingratiating insanity, this column can tip her off to what might turn out to be several valuable leads!

After numerous threats but, to the best of a memory that too often is shot as full of holes as a Swiss cheese, no materialization in the flesh, the Mills Brothers, "four boys and a guitar," finally will reach an F street stage the week of August 4. On the same bill as a costellar attraction will be Don Redman and his orchestra. The Mills Brothers, as goes with out saying, are favorites of the air—with their vocal oom-pah-pahs and close harmonies—and Don Redman and his boys have headlined in musical comedy, movies and night clubs both in this country and on the other side.

Short-reel screen comedies will be raided for the headliner at the Fox the week of August 11, when Ben Blue, leading comic in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer "Taxi Boys" releases, made by Hal Roach, will be head-man of the bill.

Among other star acts that have been booked by the Loew interests, although definite dates for their appearances have not been set, are Phil Spitalny and his orchestra; Borrah Minnevitch and his Harmonica Rascals! Harry Rose, the popular song writer; Joe Laurie, jr., Herman Timberg & Co., and Guy Lombardo and his orchestra.

So vaudeville is dead, is it?

While in the large view the chronological arrangement of major events in "Forgotten Men," the war film now at the Metropolitan, has been skillfully attended to, there are frequent instances in which scene sequences have not been quite so adroitly contrived.

This, no doubt, is due to the fact that only meager footages could be salvaged from many of the films that were taken as long as fifteen or twenty years ago.

Nevertheless, the fact remains that it is a little disconcerting to see a bombing plane cut loose its winged messengers of death and destruction in the bright sunlight of midforenoon and then see the bombs strike and wreak their havoc by the light of the moon, late at night! Maybe they had time fuses on them!

And sometimes when the commentator calls particular attention to a soldier about to be shot to death before your eyes, it turns out that by a sudden patching of the film the man you see die is not the same one you have been watching at all, although he seems to be in about the same relative position on the screen.

Speaking of "Jennie Gerhardt"—as a great many people seem to have been—without, as yet, having had an opportunity to view the picturization of the Dreiser novel now at the Earle, from all I hear and read of Sylvia Sidney's performance of the title role, I judge it must conform with admirable fidelity to the Dreiser pen picture of the character, as I recall it from a reading of the story a couple of decades or so ago.

Jennie was no gay sprite, bubbling with a Rae Schmidt's zest for living. She was a patient, stolid, drab sort of defeatist, abject and faithful in her devotions—as they happened along—sensing no need of clergy's benefit to sanctify relationships that she never entered into in any spirit of adventure, or, once embarked upon, ever violated.

If all women were as steadfast as Jennie—as Dreiser wrote her—there would be no need of a marriage ceremony. Winifred Westover's "Lummox" would be her twin.

Back in the remote days when they were written, both "Jennie Gerhardt" and "Sister Carrie," the two novels that first brought Theodore Dreiser to the fore as an arresting and a daring writer, were read in the momentary expectation that they would burst into flame in the reader's hands!

"Nitwits of the Networks!"

WHITEWAY

George Burns and Gracie Allen, favorites of the radio, movies and vaudeville, who are prominent in Loew's "Parade of Personalities" to march across the stage of Loew's Fox Theater during the remainder of the summer. They will headline the vaudeville bill announced for the week beginning Friday, July 28. Gracie hopes to find her missing link—pardon, her missing brother—during the Washington engagement. Such crazy people!

Nowadays, in competition with the Ernest Hemingways, Sinclair Lewises, Somerset Maughams, Vina Delmars and the Vicki Baums, I dare say they would not be expected to toss off even so much as one tiny spark.

These early Dreiser books, by the way, did not in any sense represent a species of literary penance. They were of normal length and written in a concise and interesting style that was extremely easy to read. Mr. Dreiser's "American Tragedy" complex did not come until years later.

I wonder what would have happened to Henry Sydnor Harrison, whose "V. V.'s Eyes" came out 'way back there, too, and his literary style, if he had lived through the years as a Dreiser contemporary? Death cut that career untimely short.

It is on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week, remember, that Pierce Hall Players are to present "Little White Mice," the three-act comedy by Edward de Star Melcher, with Mr. Melcher in the stellar role.

Only two days more, Eddie, and then you go through that little green door on the long walk to the "death watch"

Goodluck, fella—just wanted to cheer you up a bit!

For those who read the newsreels as well as the newspapers, it will be of interest that the local screens this week reflect the following notables in pursuit of their pet hobbies:

Admiral Stanley, taking the oath as Chief of Naval Operations and being verbally patted on the back by Secretary of the Navy Swanson, whom he pats right back again.

Ernst Udet, German ace of the air, stunting his plane with a dead engine and bringing it down like a feather—which will be a swell trick until some day when he doesn't do it!

Jimmy Walker, very plaintive, in a few words about being a newspaper reporter and needing a shave very, very badly. Or is he going to raise a beard and run for mayor again, disguised as Tweed or Croker?

Signor Carnera, the Lilliputian, who claims he won the championship for "Mama and Mussolini and me"

Col. Roscoe Turner, the airman who has made San Francisco a suburb of New York—or vice versa, depending upon who you are and where you're from, and don't end a sentence with a preposition!

Ella Boole, former president of the W. C. T. U., still trying to convince herself that we don't like beer!

Wonder how many have noticed that this is "Music Week" in the movie houses? Indeed, yes. Constance Bennett and Pert Kelton in "Bed of Roses," and the Mae West trailer on "She Done Him Wrong," both make use of that exquisite chansonette, "Frankie and Johnnie," as musical background and theme song, and "Forgotten Men" breaks out toward the end with "Hinky, Dinky, Parley-voo."

Shades of Beethoven!

Antiquarian note: Met a gentleman yesterday who can remember 'way back when it didn't rain every Sunday afternoon!

New Yorker Today

By Mark Barron.

NEW YORK—From the trivial among the notes of a wandering New Yorker pops up several interesting observations which might go unnoticed if one weren't on the lookout.

For instance, one of the minor commercial wars of the town has furnished some heated moments in the midtown section of Third avenue. Along the street is a lengthy row of locksmiths' shops and they have been flaring back at one another in an amusing price war.

Where the standard price has been 25 cents for a new key, the prices have been fluctuating up and down with the low mark reached the other morning when several shops were quoting keys at 2 for 9 cents.

In Brooklyn there is a huge storage plant which is used entirely for safekeeping wholesale ice—probably the most frigid spot in town. Nevertheless, twice in one week that plant was the scene of blazing fires.

A taxi driver tells me that he has drifted into a fairly profitable odd job during his off hours. He paints dots on dice, even has calling cards printed which identify him as "chauffeur and artist."

A policeman, noting that groups of persons were visiting a factory just across the Queensboro Bridge several night a week, decided to investigate. It seems that the night watchman there is an old Shakespearean actor and he entertains his friends nightly by reciting passages from the Avon playwright.

A German bartender in the Sixties has what he boasts of as a "talking crow." The crow actually can utter gutteral tones which sound almost human, this being explained by the fact that the crow has a split tongue. The bartender has hopes yet of making it actually talk.

Tip to Barbers.

That ancient problem of persuading a child to sit quietly while having his hair cut seems to have been solved by a Brooklyn barber. In place of the usual board-on-the-chair, he has placed a miniature automobile on it. The machine is covered with tricky gadgets and the youngsters become so interested in the novelty they pay no attention to the barber.

Wiley Post, round-the-world flier, was talking about the important part the name Mae has played in his life. The plane in which he and Harold Gatty set their record two years ago, was called the Winnie Mae. His mother's maiden name was May Lane, and (this is a coincidence) his wife's name was Mae Laine.

One of the major transatlantic liners came into port the other day with a total of 77 passengers. While European travel has dropped some, the chief trouble of the larger liners is that most of the tourists seem to be favoring the one-class cabin boats.

"Heiress" Is Held In Raid Upon Club

Philadelphia, July 9 (A.P.).—All but two of eighteen persons arrested early today in a raid on the fashionable Latimer Club, including a young woman who said she was an heiress, were discharged several hours later.

Investigators said they doubted the identification given by the young woman. They declared many of the patrons gave fictitious names.

Charles Gross and John Harris, alleged to have been the proprietor and bartender, respectively, were held in $500 bail each. Raiders seized three quart bottles of beverage which were turned over to the city chemist.

Stephen Benet Is Roosevelt Medal Winner

"John Brown's Body" Is Hailed by Judges in Only 1933 Award.

New York, July 9 (A.P.).—Award of the Theodore Roosevelt Medal to Stephen Vincent Benet, the poet, for a distinguished contribution to American literature was announced tonight.

James R. Garfield, president of the Roosevelt Memorial Association, said Benet's narrative poem, "John Brown's Body," which received the Pulitzer Prize in 1928, was the basis for the selection.

Only one medal, instead of the customary three, was bestowed this year. It will be presented to Benet on October 27, the seventy-fifth anniversary of Theodore Roosevelt's birth.

With the exception of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, the poet is the youngest of the 29 Americans to whom the medals have been awarded. He is 34 years old.

"The trustees took account of Theodore Roosevelt's own enthusiasm for the whole treatment in literature of American themes," said the announcement of the award.

Gang Is Raided In Factor Hunt On Tip by Girl

Chicago, June 9 (A.P.).—Police swooped down on a dozen haunts of the Roger Tuohy gang today on information that the gunmen are holding John (Jake, the barber) Factor for a huge ransom.

The raiders, under Capt. Daniel Gilbert of the State's attorney's office, made a number of flying trips into suburban hangouts of the gang after a lead had been provided by a disgruntled sweetheart of one of them.

But Factor, who has been missing nine days now, was not found and no information as to his whereabouts was uncovered, Capt. Gilbert said.

Meantime, the girl informant was held incommunicado on orders of the official, who indicated she had produced definite evidence linking the Tuohy mob with the abduction.

Capt. Gilbert said much of the income of the Tuohy hoodlums had been swept away with the advent of legalized beer. One of the members is facing trial for murder and two others are fighting return to prison for parole violation.

As a result, large defense funds are needed and it is his theory that the abduction of the speculator was decided upon to raise the money.

Factory Restores Pay Reduction.

Pottstown, Pa., July 9 (A.P.).—Howard Jarvis, superintendent of the Sweet-Orr plant, today announced restoration of a 20 per cent wage reduction, effective July 17. The factory, which employs 75, is operating on full time on an order for uniforms.

Pennsylvania Foundry To Resume Operations

Berwick, Pa., July 9 (A.P.).—The wheel foundry of the American Car & Foundry Co. plant at Berwick, idle since January 1, will resume operations on July 17, the company announced today.

Wheels will be produced to fill jobbing orders. Officials said these orders have been increasing and give the brightest outlook in several years for the jobbing business done by the plant.

Giant Crabs "Blocade" Coast.

Melbourne, Australia, July 9 (A.P.).—A horde of giant crabs have "blockaded" the coast of the State of Victoria and are causing havoc in the fishing industry.

Glen Echo Park.

On to Glen Echo was the slogan of sweltering Washingtonians over the week-end, and arriving there, their enthusiasm rose with the thermometer, until the latter was soon forgotten in the cooling waters of crystal pool, and in the mountainous air of the airplane swings, and coaster dips.

Down in the Old Mill, the temperature too, had its steam taken out, while the fun of the dodgem rides, Midway and other devices put the heat "on the spot."

Saturday night the crowds flocked to the air-cooled ballroom, and enjoyed to the full the music of MacWilliams' Orchestra. Sunday established a record for picnic parties.

With me...my cigarette is a personal, intimate thing

I suppose, men would call my reason for liking Luckies just a feminine whim. Maybe it is, but it's a whim that I love to indulge for I am always conscious of the intimate relationship between my cigarette and my lips. And if there's anything I'm sensitive about, it's that feeling of feminine daintiness. Certainly, Luckies Please! I can well understand why men praise Luckies' fine tobacco character and mellow-mildness—but as for me—I value particularly the assurance of purity which "Toasting" brings—for, with me...my cigarette is a personal, intimate thing.

Nats Beat Tribe, 3-2, Lose Half Game as Yanks Trip Tigers Twice

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

IF the king can do no wrong, the Nats are making him look like a piker at this infallibility business.

Joe Cronin's ball club hasn't been able to do anything wrong for a month. As usual, everything breaks right for the winner. The Nats make an error and nothing comes of it. The opposition make an error, and poof! three or four runs for Washington.

Yesterday's first inning was a typical example. And the Nats win their seventh straight ball game. The winner may make his own breaks, but the goddess who rules over hits, runs and errors is usually with him.

Difference in Breaks.

For example:

Two are on base for the Indians in the first inning. Willie Kamm knocks a fast hopper to Bluege. The Nats' third baseman kicks it away. The bases are thereby filled. It looks like the break. But nothing comes of it. Hale is an easy third out to Manush.

And then the Nats' half of the same inning. The same situation. Two are out, two are on. Schulte hits a slow roller to Cissell. He makes an error when he should have retired the side. The boot gives Kuhel a chance to bat. Smack! A single, and two runs are over where there should have been none.

A moment later, Schulte is running home from third after Bluege bounces to Kamm. But two are out, and it's an easy throw for Kamm. But he heaves it into the dirt, Bluege is safe and Schulte's run counts. That's the way of the winner.

Chapman for Averill.

The owners of the Cleveland club have been ruing for months their unhappy decision to refuse a trade broached by the New York Yankees last season.

The deal proposed by Manager McCarthy of the Yanks would have sent Ben Chapman and another player to Cleveland in exchange for Earl Averill. The Indians turned the deal down. And what happens?

Averill, their star outfielder and leading hitter of the club, bats in the .280's and is benched for weak hitting. Chapman becomes one of the best hitters in the league.

The sad lot of the Cleveland club this season is easy to explain. With potentially the best pitching staff in the league, the Indians are a bad sixth because their three leading hitters of 1932, Averill, Joe Vosmik and Bill Cissell have a combined batting average of only .254 this season. That's why.

Runs, Hits and Errors.

The crowd couldn't help but cheer Willie Kamm's outrageously clever stop of Goslin's hot shot in the first inning. . . . the front office had a heart when the rain fell in the sixth and admitted the 2,000 bleacherites into the covered grand stand . . . sentiment in baseball, after all, perhaps when those black clouds hung over the park in the fifth and sixth innings, Umpire Kolls made Pearson use a brand-new white ball . . . what a day for Walter Johnson's old smoke . . . they wouldn't have touched Walter if they'd been swinging a hunk of the right field wall . . . the Nats' team batting average of .306 took a drop . . . the Detroit Club of 1921 had a team average of .321 . . . but the Yankees won the pennant last year with .284 . . . and the Giants fifth in team batting in the National, and sixth in team fielding, are leading the league comfortably . . . Bobby Burke pitched one ball in Boston four years ago and received credit for winning the game.

Mangin Captures Title.

Montclair, N. J., July 9 (A.P.).—Gregory S. Mangin, of Newark, won the New Jersey State tennis singles championship today, overpowering Herbert L. Bowman, of New York, 8—6, 6—4, 4—6, 6—3.

Barry Ready for Galento Tonight

Knowles and Lucas Due to Swap Punches in Semifinal.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

IF Tony Galento is one-half the fighter publicity agents would have you believe he is, Mr. Reds Barry is in for a warm reception tonight at Twin City Arena, Laurel. The two throw gloves in the feature ten-round bout of the card.

Galento comes to town ballyhooed as the twentieth century marvel, a veritable fighting machine that can whip its weight in wildcats, &c. Barry succumbed to the potency of Galento's right-hand punch several weeks back, but Reds doesn't happen to be a wildcat, not even an ill-tempered tabby, in the mind of the local boxing public.

To Pedal Way Around.

The Southeast boy thoughtfully has planned a method of attack for the impending battle, and a bicycle figures in the blueprints. He will pedal furiously around the ring, back and forth, in and out, and keep pedaling until the very last round, or until Mr. Galento overtakes him.

Barry, to be brief, expects to win on points. It's a sensible idea, probably prompted by none to pleasant memories of his first meeting with the New Jersey mittman. On that occasion the redhead elected to slug it out and instead was slugged out—in the first round.

Aided by a longer reach and greater heighth Barry should be able to outmaneuver Galento, but there are some who think the latter will corner Red, wade into him, taking a couple of blows to get into position, and heave a haymaker. Galento is rugged, more of a tough hombre than a polished boxer, and he can take it. He should be strong enough to weather a couple of punches, especially Barry's, to get in a kayo clout.

What appears to be a good match has been scheduled in the semi-final, Chief Perry Knowles vs. Sammy Lucas, but the rest of the card is comprised of mediocre talent. Be that as it may, veteran ring fans are aware of the fact that it is the unknown youngsters, determinedly throwing gloves from all angles, who usually wage the best scraps of the night.

Bob Lowry and Benny Ladis' latest discovery, Kelly O'Neil, are down for six rounds, the same distance as the semifinalists will go. Roma Labona hooks up with George Harmon and Sam Romano meets Angelo Brocato in fours.

Brooklyn Divides Two With Cards

Takes First in Tenth, 8-6, but Is Shut Out, 2-0, in Final Game.

St. Louis, July 9 (A.P.).—The Brooklyn Dodgers and the St. Louis Cardinals split a double-header here today, Ralph Boyle, Brooklyn outfielder, cutting a tenth inning knot to give Brooklyn the first game, 8 to 6, and Tex Carleton shutting the Dodgers out, 2 to 0, in the final.

Stewart Slab Foe Today of Tribe

Ladies Will Be Guests; Streak Is Prolonged by Averill.

By Frank H. Young.

IT will be up to Walter Stewart to southpaw the Nationals to a series clean-up over the Indians this afternoon and, if he does this, he will give the Nats a record of 19 victories in their last 22 games and will let them equal their own and the American League's longest winning streak of the season—8 in a row. Naturally, Manager Walter Johnson and members of his Tribe have other ideas on the subject and Mel Harder, one of the Indians' big three staff, will draw the pitching assignment.

As last Friday's game was declared off and held over as part of Saturday's double-header, President Clark Griffith has announced that the usual ladies' day invitation holds good today.

Of the 17 hits credited the two teams yesterday, only one netted an extra base, Boss getting it. It was a double to right and was the first safety of the game.

Earl Averill was a nonstarter for the Tribe yesterday, but prolonged his consecutive-game-playing streak to 527 by getting in as a pinch-hitter in the eighth after it looked as though rain had ended the game before he got his chance. Averill was benched for not hitting. And, just to think, only last week he played on the American League's star team against the pick of the National and only last year he told Johnson his present boss, that the Nats' mound staff was made up of throwers, not pitchers!

While Manager Johnson is hopeful that his charges suddenly will take a new lease on life and show something in the league race, he admitted yesterday that he thinks the Nationas have an excellent chance of copping the 1933 gonfalon.

"Cronin has his boys playing heads-up baseball; they're fielding well and getting good hitting, while they're getting good pitching," he said. "But, above all things, they're lucky and are getting the breaks. The breaks helped Washington win in 1924, you remember, and it looks like this season is a reptition of that one.

"Of course, you've got to remember that I'm a Cleveland rooter now, and we're going to do our best to stop you, but I must say that it looks like the Nats are liable to upset the preseason dope and win."

Willie Kamm came up with a hit-robbing one-hand grab of Goslin's hot grasser in the first and forced out Manush at second. But later in the round Willie lost considerable caste by making a wild peg to first while the Nats were scoring their third run of the frame.

The Nats seemed to be taking turns personally retiring the Indians, Catcher Luke Sewell made all three putouts in a row in the third and then Manush did it the next round. Fred Schulte was credited with the first two in the fifth, making eight consecutive putouts via the aerial route.

It looked as though Galatzer, Hale and Porter would stage the Alphonse-Gaston act while chasing Cronin's looper in the seventh, but the rightfielder forgot his che and caught the ball.

Vosmik did not have a chance afield until the eighth. Then he had two.

Pitcher Pearson, the strikeout king of the association while with Toledo, did not have a Nat victim until the eighth when he whiffed McAfee.

Indian Spring's Golf Team Triumphs

By Dave Herman.

INDIAN SPRING'S golfers brought out their high explosives yesterday and blasted into defeat an all-star team from Baltimore by the surprisingly large count of 24½ to 11½.

When the smoke of the battle had cleared late in the evening, the Monumental City linksmen discovered that most of their outstanding players had been victimized by the expert shotmakers from Indian Spring.

Roger Peacock, the District champion, and Tom Belshe, trained their heavy artillery on lanky Ernie Caldwell and Spencer Overton, and swept to victory, 3 points to 0. Peacock provided the day's feature with a subpar 70. He and Belshe carved out the best-ball of 66—the lowest reported. Belshe shot a 72.

Corkran's Team Beaten.

The old war horse, B. Warren Corkran, who defends his Maryland State Amateur title at Indian Spring next month, teamed with Talbot Speer, but the pair was able to garner but one-half point in their match with J. W. Harvey, jr., and Larry S. Otell, Indian Spring captain.

Indian Spring won 8 out of the 12 matches.

There was plenty of low scoring. Dave Crook starred for the visiting brigade with a 71. M. Parker Nolan, the heavyweight star, rallied spectacularly on the last four holes of the first nine shooting 3—3—3—2—4 below par for the four holes. He fired in an eagle 3 on the 460-yard seventh, to round the turn in 35. Nolan finished with 72.

Louis Fuchs, caught in a torrential downpour, needed a par 3 and 4 for a 69, but shot 4—5.

Best Baltimore Golfers Bow.

J. W. Harvey, jr., and Larry S. Otell, Indian Spring (2½); B. W. Cochran and T. T. Spear, Baltimore (½); Roger Peacock and Tom Belshe, Indian Spring (3); Ernie Caldwell and Spencer Overton, Baltimore (0); Dave Crook and Don McPhail, Baltimore (2½); Craig McKee and M. Parker Nolan, Indian Spring (½).

LeRoy Sasscer and Alex Baumgartner, Indian Spring (0); Ron O'Brien and Carl Snock, Baltimore (½); Arthur Urban and Louis Fuchs, Indian Spring (3); Tom Symington and Bob McLean, Baltimore (0); Tom Sasscer and Gene Burning, Baltimore (2½); Bill Balaskie, Indian Spring (½).

Red Sox Win First, Lose Second to Browns

Boston, July 9 (A.P.).—The Red Sox shut out the Browns, 4 to 0, in the first game of a double-header today and then were humbled, 9 to 2, in the nightcap.

George Pipgras, on the mound for Boston, allowed the St. Louis batsmen but five hits in the first game while Cooke, Boston center fielder, had a perfect day at bat, getting three doubles and a single and driving in three of Boston's four runs.

Jim Levey, St. Louis shortstop, was injured in the fourth inning of the first game when he was hit on the arm by one of Pipgras' slants. He was given a courtesy runner and played the rest of the game. He failed to appear for the second game, however, and officials said an X-ray would be taken of his arm to determine the extent of his injury.

Cubs Take Pair From Giants; Gain Third

League Leaders Bow by 4-0, 2-1; Warneke and Tinning Heroes.

CHICAGO, July 9 (A.P.).—The National League Champion Chicago Cubs climbed into third place today by winning both games of a double-header from the sagging New York Giants, 4 to 0, and 2 to 1, on brilliant pitching performances by Lonnie Warneke and Bud Tinning.

After Warneke had shut the league-leading Giants out with six hits in the opener, Tinning held them to four hits in the nightcap and batted in Billy Jurges with the winning run in the ninth inning. The Cubs bunched six hits off Carl Hubbell in the first game for all their runs, the Giant southpaw retiring under fire in the fifth inning. Freddy Fitzsimmons gave the victors only five hits in the second game, but suffered by poor support.

Sixth Giant Loss In Row.

The victories gave the Cubs five in a row and a sweep of the four-game series with the Giants, whose losing streak was extended to six games. Tinning's triumph was his seventh in a row, while Warneke accounted for his tenth of the season.

Four New Champions to Be Crowned Tonight in A. A. U. Meet at McKinley Pool

Capital Stars Entered in Events

At least four new champions will emerge from the McKinley pool sometime after 8 o'clock tonight crowned with new District A. A. U. outdoor swimming titles.

The meet, held under auspices of the Welfare and Recreational Association of the Public Buildings and Public Parks Office, finds the defending champions in the men's 50-yard free style, 150-yard backstroke and low board diving, Philip Bateson, John Hain and Mahlon Glascock, not entered. And it also offers a brand-new event, the 100-yard free style, for those with titular aspirations to aim at.

More Entries Expected.

About 70 have entered the men's events to date, and more entries are expected today. The largest field probably will scramble for Bateson's 50-yard free style crown, for which 14 candidates have already entered.

The 200-yard relay between the Ambassador, Shoreham and Y. M. C. A. teams promises to result in the merriest scramble of the evening. The title-defending Ambassador team is composed of Robert Ralls, Vincent Gomez, Norman Smith and Jack Rait. Ronald McMillan, George Gross, T. R. Burn and J. LaSalle will represent Shoreham, while John Mullady, Ernest Boggs, William Marmion and Leonard Johnson will comprise the Y. M. C. A. aggregation.

Men's Diving Contest.

A strong list of entries, featuring among others, Broaddus, Lyman, and Gomez, will participate in the men's low board diving contest.

Although candidates and incumbents in the women's events have all been rather tardy in sending in their entries, it is known for a certainty that Lois Bates, one of Washington's outstanding women swimmers, will be on hand to protect her laurels.

List of events, records and officials:

Rockville Extends Streak.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

A PROBLEM in theory as well as in fact is that of the snakes.

It is a well known fact that many snakes can swallow objects—including other snakes—larger than themselves; that they also must continue to swallow whatever they start on because the snake can not reject anything that it has started to eat. What, then, would be the result if three snakes each grasped the tail of another so as to form a continuous circle as shown above?

Assume these to be the facts: none of the snakes can release the snake it has started to swallow and each of them is capable of swallowing the other two.

Coins of value, as distinguished from "fiat" money which of itself has little value, were first made, so far as is known, when the merchants of Lydia struck button-like coins of "electrum," an alloy of gold and silver, about 687 B. C. They were, in fact, small ingots of the valuable metals, each of which represented the actual value of the metal is contained.

An earlier form of money was known to other civilizations, such as the Egyptian "object" money—but this was a form of fiat money which served as a means of exchange by consent of the people rather than because it had any real value.

Arlington Park Race Track, July 9.

Dear Al: We called the Dyak race one, two, three, for you, and in a gallop, as predicted, but that was all for the day. Most of the gang here spent today looking over the "Century of Progress" show. It is really some affair, but, with all the progress made the last hundred years, it does seem funny that some guy has not developed a plan that will beat the races.

In spite of what Smitty tells Rosy about his new "inside" system, I want to warn you again there will be racing all summer, and, if you wish to last, your only chance is to pick out a couple of races daily and shoot. You may beat a race, but the races, well, old boy, that is vastly different.

The whole card Monday is a typical wash-day affair, so be careful or they will clean you. Yours, BILL.

FIRST RACE—Nothing to get excited about in this scramble of 2-year-old maidens. Your head needs examining if you touch it. LIGHTNING BILL, BRAMBLE BROOM and GENERAL PARTH are as good as any.

SECOND RACE—Here's another for the weak-minded. Any one of the bunch might win without comment. JUSTICE B., CONCISUS and MINTOGEE may greet the judges.

THIRD RACE—Now we jump up a bit. These critters are all maiden 3-year-olds. Not one has a real right to win tomorrow. SURETY, SID LEA and MICHIGAN LAD are as good as any.

FOURTH RACE—FLAG HORN will have RESUBMISSION to beat, while LES MISERABLES and WITCHES NIGHT should fight it out for show end.

FIFTH RACE—BOILERMAKER does not crave a mile and has extra weight up, still he has a smattering of class and Westrope may get him home. DARK WINTER and NORTHGALIS for place and show. SILENT SHOT can win, should going turn heavy.

SIXTH RACE—If PLUCKY PLAY is sent back he should win. I prefer EVERGOLD and WATCH HIM for balance of purse.

SEVENTH RACE—PEACE LADY has the rail, is lightly weighted and may never be headed. SCIMATAR and OLD JUDGE will be fighting it out.

EIGHTH RACE—LONGUS should go to the front and stay there. Will have a real jock up tomorrow. COG AIR and KING PIN will be knocking at the door.

BEHIND the matserful pitching of Ray Davidson, the Stanton Cleaners yesterday defeated the hitherto unbeaten Dor-A nine, 7—0, in the feature game of the Capital City League. The Stantons assumed the lead by their victory while Dor-A dropped into a second place tie with Miller Furniture Co. Griffith Blue Coals nosed out the Federals, 3-2, in the only other game scheduled.

Davidson turned back the hard-hitting suburbanites with a single hit, breezing the ball by the bewildered Dor-A batters, as goose egg after goose egg was added to the erstwhile leaders' score.

Dor-A helped their opponents to victory in the second inning when every member of the infield went haywire. Arlie Jones, starting pitcher, set the stage for trouble by walking the first two men to face him. "Shorty" Chumbbris started the fireworks with a wild throw to first, and a succession of wild pitches enabled three runners to cross the pan. The Stantons scored six runs before Dor-A settled down to clinch the verdict.

Jones Relieves Ruble.

Bob Ruble relieved Jones in the same inning and held the Northeast crew well in hand over the remainder of the route. Play was halted by rain in the seventh inning.

The Federals came dangerously near overtaking the Griffs in the sixth inning when they scored two runs. But rain stopped the game in the next stanza and the Griffs walked off the field with a 3-2 victory.

Two for St. Jerome's

St. Jerome's Midgets added two more wins to their string yesterday, defeating the Ballston Bearcats, 4-1, and the Clarendon Generals, 5-0, in a game stopped by rain at the end of the fifth. The contests were played on the Wilson School field and ran the St. Jerome's straight victory streak to 10.

Lanham Nine Cops.

Lanham A. C. walloped the Colmar Manor nine, 18-8, when the Prince Georges County teams met at Lanham yesterday. Much of the game was played in the rain, and there was a deal of loose fielding.

Lanham took the lead in the second inning and stayed in front. Bill Hickerson pitched well for the winners, fanning twelve. Davis, A. Moreland, Waters and C. Rector, of the winners, each connected for three hits.

Heinie Forgets Baseball Momentarily

Mr. Heinie Manush, slugging outfielder for the Nats, at this moment may not be quite at the top of the American League in hitting, but it's a cinch he's far and away the best man of the whole world, baseball or not, in the eyes of these three youngsters. Heinie is shown with Lillis Louise, pulling on his tie, Sue Ella, enjoying a "horsey ride" on his back, and Shirley Anne, at right, trying also to pile on.

A 4-YEAR-OLD bundle of perpetual motion in the form of Shirley Anne Manush gave a running jump and landed around the neck of Washington's favorite Dutchman as he lay sprawled on the lawn of his Cleveland Park home, resting up for the big double-header Saturday.

Heinie extricated himself from a combination Londos arm bar lock and scissors hold, ruefully rubbed a bumped nose and removed Shirley Anne's shoe (occupied by a foot) from his right ear. Lillis Louise Manush, a 3-year-old personification of maidenly dignity, frowned in obvious disapproval.

"Boy, can I take it?" chuckled the grinning outfielder, launching a miniature, but highly threatening flying tackle in Shirley Anne's direction. "I take it out there on the ballfield all afternoon, but it can't be any tougher than this."

Didn't Have a Chance.

They romped to the fence, whence they were called back into the center of the ring by Grandmother Manush, who sat holding Sue Ella Manush, an interested but blase spectator, and acting as referee in this one-sided match. And it was a one-sided match. Heinie didn't have a chance.

The Post cameraman, in the meantime, was undergoing a very thorough scrutiny from Lillis Louise, who apparently couldn't decide whether or not she approved of him, but had just about decided against him and all cameramen in general.

To her great delight, 7-month-old Sue Ella was placed on the grass beside her father, who already had his hands full. Shirley Anne welcomed the ally with open arms. The photographer got ready to shoot. The subjects moved. He tried again. The same result.

Slow Down, He Pleads.

"Say listen, Heinie," complained the picture snapper, "this is a high-speed lense, but it's not fast enough to catch you three unless you slow down to about 20 knots. The way you're going now, I'd need a slow motion picture camera to get even a blur."

"Buddy, if you can slow these kids down, you should come out and live with us. They're great kids, but they're healthy and full of energy. But it does keep me in swell shape."

Nee clicked off a par-smashing 69 as he and his partner, Harry Pitt, of Manor, defeated the professionals, Al Tredor, of Manor ,and Mel Shorey, of East Potomac, 3 and 1.

Nee Has Subpar 69.

The Columbia star's 69 was 2 below par. He burned up the first nine in 33 strokes—3 below—after accumulating birdies on the fourth and sixth. Pitt shot a 73; Shorey, a 74 and Tredor, a 77.

The pros won the second hole to go 1 up, thanks to Shorey's birdie 2. Nee and Pitt scored birdies on the fourth to even the match, and Nee gave his team the lead by running down a 40-footer for an eagle 3 on the 467-yard ninth.

Pitt and Nee became 2 up by winning the eleventh, halved the next five holes, and settled the issue on the seventeenth where Pitt was the only one who could nab his par 3.

Turning in a best ball of 69, Danny Burton, pro, and Maj. Richard K. Sutherland, club champion, both of Army and Navy, conquered Gene Larkin and Louis (Bunny) Mackall, of Chevy Chase, yesterday at the former's course, 3 and 1, in an exhibition match.

Burton provided the big punch by niblicking into the cup from 50 yards for an eagle deuce on the 260-yard sixth hole that evened the match after the Chevy Chase pair had taken the lead by winning the first hole. The match was all square going to the tenth. Burton won the thirteenth with a birdie, the Army and Navy golfers went 2 up by capturing the fourteenth, and they clinched the match by taking the seventeenth.

Both Burton and Sutherland shot 74s; Larkin had 77, and Mackall, 79.

Billy Dettweiler and George F. Miller, playing together in a friendly match yesterday at Manor, carved out a best ball of 64, and were recipients of much congratulations when news of their score reached friends at the club.

Their score:

In	434	444	434	—34—64

Gilbert Hahn's 81—15—66 won him top prize in the sweepstakes at Woodmont. Morris Cafritz, with 102—30—72, emerged second, and Howard Nordlinger, club champion, took third with 83—7—76.

Dr. Buck W. C. C. Winner.

Dr. C. E. Buck, with 79—14—65, captured the low net prize in the sweepstates at Washington Golf and Country Club. R. P. Brandt, with 91—20—71, and G. E. Applegate, with 92—21—71, tied for second prize. Walter McCallum posted a 79 for first low gross prize, while Ralph Fowler won second with his 84.

Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Beck are the best husband and wife golfers at Manor. They proved this yesterday when they turned in a combined score of 181—34—147 to win the annual championship. Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Saffell, with 195—46—149 were second.

Two eagles on the same hole!

That was the feat claimed yesterday by Al Houghton, pro, and Royce Hough, on the 485-yard fifth hole, which each negotiated in threes. Houghton, 4 feet away on his second, easily canned his putt. Hough pumped in a 20-footer for his three.

Houghton says this is the first time such a thing has been accomplished at Kenwood.

D. C. Pros at Alexandria.

A number of District pros will invade the nine-hole course at Belle Haven in Alexandria this afternoon to engage in a sweepstakes. Tommy Ryan is the pro at Belle Haven. Among those who plan to play are George Diffenbaugh, Al Tredor, Leo Walper, A. B. Thorn, Walter and Frank Cunningham, Mel Shorey, and Al Houghton.

Sandy Armour equaled par at Congressional yesterday while touring the course with Mrs. H. A. Knox and Mrs. Leonard Chatman. The genial pro had a brace of 36's.

Five Eagles Made In D. C. Yesterday

Eagles became almost as popular as birdies during the course of yesterday's warfare on local golf fronts, no less than five being made.

Maury Nee, of Columbia, playing in an exhibition match, shot an eagle 3 on the ninth at Manor. Danny Burton, Army and Navy pro, also engaged in an exhibition match, nabbed an eagle 2 on the sixth hole of his home course. Parker Nolan bagged an eagle on the seventh at Indian Spring in the inter-city matches with Baltimore. Over at Kenwood Al Houghton and Royce Hough scored eagle 3s at the same time on the same hole—the fifth.

GEORGIA AVENUE BUSINESS MEN strengthened their position as leaders of the Capital City League junior division by winning over Goodacre's yesterday, 12 to 7. It was the second straight victory for Georgia Avenue and the second consecutive loss for Goodacre's. Dixie Products made its debut in the second half-series with a thrilling 1-0 victory over Rinaldi Coal Co.

Corcoran, Gregoric and Chaconas led the uprising against Bieber and Lomax, Goodacre hurlers, collecting eight hits among themselves. The Business Men tallied seven runs in the fifth frarpe to put the game on ice. "Stump" Talburst was nicked for ten safeties by Goodacre's but managed to keep them safely scattered. Darmsted and Bresnahan topped the losers at bat.

Run Scored in Ninth.

Two were out in the last half of the ninth inning when Dixie Products rallied to score the only run of their game with Rinaldi. Morris Desimons started the uprising with a long double to left centerfield. He came scampering home when the next batter, Joe Cotter, connected for another two-bagger.

Roddy Bell, for the winners, and Ed Turner, Rinaldi moundsman, hooked up in a pretty pitching battle, with Bell having slightly the best of the duel.

Farm Leaders See Challenge To Wheat Tax

Legal Test Expected Soon as 30-Cent-a-Bushel Levy Is Imposed.

(Associated Press.)

A processing tax of 30 cents a bushel rested since Saturday midnight squarely upon all wheat going into the making of food for American consumers, and administrators of the farm act yesterday were expectant of an early legal test of this first application of one of their principal powers.

They were uncertain from what quarter the test would come, but both Secretary Wallace and George N. Peek, chief administrator, said frankly they looked for a prompt challege in the courts of their authority to levy the processing tax on wheat.

While this tax went into effect yesterday on grain poured into the hoppers of flour mills and other primary wheat processing plants, and also upon the floor stocks of millers, wholesale dealers and bakers, retail dealers will have 30 days during which foods made chiefly of wheat are not taxable.

The expected legal challenge today failed to dampen the enthusiasm of Wallace, Peek and other aids for their general farm program. Both expressed pleasure over the response of cotton farmers to their acreage reduction plan.

They reported that up to about Friday noon farmers had offered to plow up more than 5,500,000 acres of their growing crop in return for Government benefits. This meant that the campaign for reduction had passed the half-way mark.

Because the campaign has proceeded at its greatest speed in recent days, administrators believed that the more than 22,000 field workers had obtained on Friday and Saturday agreements from growers covering from 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 additional acres.

Wallace postponed the final date for receiving contract-offers from Saturday to Wednesday and expects the campaign to hit its fastest pace during the next three days. But if farmers in a substantial number have not had an opportunity to sign contracts by that time he will provide a further extension.

If Wallace succeeds in obtaining agreements for removing from 10,000,000 to 11,000,000 acres from production, he is confident that this year's potential crop can be reduced at least 3,000,000 bales. This would bring the prospective crop to around 10,000,000 bales, a substantial decrease from the high rate of production of the last decade.

S. California Plans Crew Races Annually

Long Beach, Calif., July 9 (A.P.).—National Intercollegiate crew racing has come to Southern California to stay.

This was the unanimous opinion of the officials today following the first running of the National sprint championship late yesterday which saw Washington lead Yale to the finish by six feet.

Coach Major Goodsell of the University of California, at Los Angeles, whose dream it was that became a reality yesterday, already is laying plans for a 1934 race even greater than the one presented this year.

This despite the fact that the crowd of 15,000 persons who paid to witness the spectacle failed by approximately $2,500 to take care of the expenses, underwritten by Southern California business men, of bringing the varsity eights here for the championship.

Mrs. Hard, Mrs. Schneidt Take Exhibition Match

Eastern Point, Conn., July 9 (U.P.).—Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Charlotte T. Schneidt, of Norristown, Pa., today defeated Miss Kathryn Bragaw, of Montclair, N. J., and Miss Jane Brooks, of New York, 2 up in a 4-ball exhibition match over an 18-hole golf course.

Their match was a preliminary to tomorrow's opening of the fifteenth annual women's invitation tournament of the Shenecossett Country Club.

The last two holes were played in a rain that changed to hail, sending the gallery scurrying for cover before pelting ice balls two inches in diameter. The match had just ended before the hailstorm.

Fair Stamps Won't Stick!

Century of Progress Issue Also to Be Unique by Not Being Cut; Both Innovations Will Increase Values.

A paste pot and a pair of scissors must be the equipment of every person who expects to use any of the 250,000 Chicago Century of Progress commemorative stamps Postmaster General Farley authorized for printing yesterday.

As a compliment to the American Philatelic Society, meeting in Chicago, August 21 to 26, and as a part of the Bureau of Engraving's exhibit in the Federal Building of the exposition, the stamps will be issued in blocks of 25 without perforations to facilitate tearing and without gum to simplify sticking.

Not Economy Move.

Officials of the Postoffice Department and of the Bureau of Engraving deny that President Roosevelt's economy program has had anything to do with the issuing of what probably is the first American postage stamp made so it can't be stuck. It is merely that the Bureau of Engraving lacks facilities for gumming stamps at the Chicago exhibit.

President Roosevelt, Postmaster General Farley and other stamp collectors are expected to be pleased, as the gumless stamp probably will be more valuable than the mine-run of postage stamps, more valuable than the other Century of Progress stamps which can be stuck.

On the other hand, those who buy stamps only when they want to mail a letter will not be discommoded unduly, for the commemorative stamps, while they may be used in the mails, are to be sold only at the fair and at the Washington agency of the Philatelic Society, room 216, District Postoffice.

The stamps are to be of both the 1-cent, green, and 3-cent, purple, denominations and will bear around the border the following inscription:

"Printed by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing by authority of James A. Farley, Postmaster General, at the Century of Progress Exposition, in compliment to the American Philatelic Society, Chicago, August, 1933."

For the convenience of the philatelist who may wish to send the stamps through the mails and who may be attending the society's meeting in Chicago, President C. W. Hennan has arranged to have on hand a minature gumming machine.

Cotton Gains Fail to Excite Lancashire

Great Spinning District Withholds Stocking Up at New Prices.

Manchester England, July 9 (A.P.).—Lancashire, one of the greatest cotton spinning districts in the world, is viewing the rise in price of the great American staple with its traditional conservatism.

Lancashire is not stocking up with cotton at these prices, but experts here declare that this situation is not necessarily based on a belief that the rise in prices will fail to hold.

The custom in Lancashire is to wait to analyze and test the market rather than to rush in and buy. Some textile circles here point to the large world carry over of cotton as an adequate reason for caution. Nevertheless it is acknowledged that not only may the advance hold but that it may continue as the result of the American crop restriction program and the general world recovery.

May Increase Competition.

Lancashire normally buys more than half its raw fiber from the United States and is watching with intense interest the decline in the dollar and the rise in prices in terms of dollars. Thus far the rise in prices has about kept pace with the drop of the dollar so that there is little net change in the ability of the British to buy from America.

Industry here acknowledges with some concern that the decline of the dollar may increase the competition from American-completed fabrics in the world market, but thus far it has been solaced by the rise of American prices and wages which probably has canceled almost entirely any advantage from the fall of the dollar.

Export Trade Vital.

Export trade is vital to Lancashire, for in good times it sent some 80 per cent of its finished cotton goods output abroad. Like American industry, the big British cotton business now is trying to concentrate on the home market, but, developed and equipped as cotton spinner to the world, it can not sustain itself at home, and even now produces some 70 per cent for export.

Manchester, the center of this great industry, has cradled the free-trade movement and now is glad to see the domestic market protected, but, exporting such a large proportion of its output, it can not reconcile this with the desire to see trade barriers reduced or removed in other countries.

The World Economic Conference is being watched here most hopefully not only in the expectation that trade barriers may be lowered, but many quarters are urging wider adoption of the American inflationary program. It is explained here that a gradual rise in prices would be best for business.

23 Imperiled in Frat House Fire; Man Held

Three Injured in Leap; "Firebug" Blamed After Gasoline Found.

Twenty-three young fraternity men barely escaped with their lives early yesterday, when fire, believed of incendiary origin, swept the first floor of the Sigma Chi fraternity house of George Washington University at 1312 N street northwest. Three youths suffered severe burns and other injuries requiring hospital treatment.

An empty 5-gallon can that had contained gasoline was found in the wrecked front room. A 2-gallon spray bucket, containing about a pint of gasoline, was found on the second floor.

In the garage back of the house police found a 5-gallon milk can containing another pint of the inflammable liquid. Several rugs saturated with gasoline were found in the basement. It also was discovered that the garage had been broken into and gasoline had been drained from the tank of an automobile kept there.

Suspect Is Held.

Police arrested Uriah Hobbs, 46, as a suspect. He was taken to the Second Precinst Station where he is held pending investigation. Hobbs who gave his address as Todd place, northeast, formerly had used the garage behind the fraternity house but was put out for failure to pay his rent, the police said.

An official estimate made yesterday after the fire, placed the damage at around $10,000.

The alarm was first given to the twenty-three young men who were asleep in the house at about 4:00 a. m., when Charles Miller, on the third floor, awakened and aroused others with cries "fire."

Leaps From Window.

Unable to reach the telephone, Miller leaped from a window and, hailing a passing motorist, asked him to call the fire department. Miller said later that when he began stirring about he heard someone run downstairs. He believes this was the unidentified arsonist.

With the first floor in flames, many of the boys sought escape through upstairs windows, one of them leaping through a window in the house next door. Four others were forced to hang from a ledge on the third floor until the firemen brought ladders.

The three youths who required hospital treatment are James Hallett, 25, of Fort Humphreys, Va., John Thaxter, 20, of Waukegan, Ill., and Ray Heimburger, 23, of Sandusky, Ohio. Hallett was severely burned on his right hand and on his face. He has returned to his home in Fort Humphreys where his father, Lieut. Col. Harvey J. Hallett, is a medical officer.

Injured in Leap.

Thaxter suffered severe burns on his chest, hands, nose and ears. Heimburger was cut on his legs when he jumped from a fourth-story window to a roof about 15 feet below him and fell through a skylight. All three were taken to Emergency Hospital and were dismissed yesterday morning.

The firemen were able to put out the fire in less than two hours after their arrival but not before the house was badly damaged. Virtually all the furniture on the first floor was destroyed, including a concert piano and an upholstered living room suite. A case full of books also was ruined. The hard wood floor downstairs was badly charred. Pictures on the walls were burned and loving cups won by the fraternity in various contests were melted into shapeless masses of metal. The rooms upstairs were damaged by heat, which took the paint off the doors, lossened the wall paper, and blackened the walls and furniture.

The house is owned by the Robert Farnham Memorial Association and has been occupied by the Epsilon Chapter, George Washington University, of Sigma Chi National Fraternity. Insurance appraisers will visit the house today. The men in the house were not prepared to say yesterday, what their plans would be regarding a chapter house for the coming school year. They are moving elsewhere for the summer.

Man Drops Billfold; Another Flees With It

William De Vaughn, of 120 Atlantic street southeast, dropped a billfold on the street while fixing a tire on his automobile parked at Fifth street and Virginia avenue southeast yesterday afternoon. He told police that as he stooped over to pick it up a colored man snatched it from his fingers and jumped to the side of a taxi cab.

The cab escaped, he reported, as did the colored man and his wallet, containing $38.

Man Is Slain in Street Fight; Killer Escapes

Fonnie Nelson, colored, of 1227 New Jersey avenue northwest, was shot and killed last night during an altercation near North Capitol street and Fenton place northwest.

Police said he was wounded by an unidentified colored man, who fled. Nelson died a few minutes later in Emergency Hospital.

'Cut-Rate' Milk For Preferred Buyers Alleged

Seal to Probe Charge That Some Customers Pay Two Cents Less.

That Washington dairies maintain a list of "preferred customers" to whom they sell milk from one to two cents below the established price of 13 cents a quart was indicated in complaints received last night by The Post.

By persistently demanding a lower price some Washingtonians have been purchasing delivered quarts for 11 and 12 cents while their neighbors, often buying from the same dairy, have been paying the regular price, the complainants stated.

An investigation of this new angle of the milk inquiry will be launched today by Elwood H. Seal, special counsel for the Senate subcommittee that has been conducting the probe here.

Price discrimination has not entered dairy competition in the District before, at least in recent years, according to Mr. Seal. The Senate probers have supposed that consumers have been paying a uniform price of 13 cents except in cases where certain dairies have allowed a discount equal to that enjoyed by customers who are members of "thrift" associations, Mr. Seal said.

Learning that several of her acquaintances had been buying milk for 11 cents from the same dairy that delivered to her for 13 cents, the housewife called the dairy and requested that delivery be discontinued. When she gave price variation as her reason, one of the dairy executives agreed to deliver for 11 cents.

Later the housewife called another dairy. In this case the dairy manager was said to have informed her that milk might be sold in large quantities to apartment house dwellers for 11 cents, but that in small quantities the price was 13 cents.

The housewife declined to place an order to start delivery. About an hour afterward, however, a representative of the dairy called and offered milk delivery at 11 cents.

Woman Found Dead; Believed Fall Victim

Mary Barnes, 70, 935 Massachusetts avenue northwest, was found dead on the third-story landing of her home yesterday by a roomer in the house.

Police said the aged woman probably fell from the flight above while walking during the night. She had been dead about six hours when the body was discovered. An autopsy will be performed today.

Auto Breaks Off Light Pole.

In collision with the automobile of William Baker, 37, colored, 1834 Fourth street northwest, a vehicle operated by Louis Sokolov, 35, 4210 Fourteenth street northwest, careened into an electric light pole at Eleventh and W streets northwest last night, breaking it off at the base. No one was injured.

Pastor Decries Overemphasis On Humanism

Dr. Poore, at Masonic Club Day, Urges Faith in Supernatural.

Decrying what he described as a tendency to overemphasize humanism in religion, Dr. Allen F. Poore, pastor of the Waugh M. E. Church, urged a return to faith in the supernatural in his sermon yesterday, which featured Masonic Club Day services on Temple Heights.

"The trouble with the world today," Dr. Poore declared, "is not economic. We are trying to get along without the supernatural in religion—without Christ."

Men fail, Dr. Poore said, more often because of moral defect than because of faulty intellect. An acute intellect, he continued, will be a curse to the man who possesses it unless it is counterbalanced by a keen sense of moral obligation.

Dr. Simpson B. Daugherty, pastor of the United Brethren Church, conducted the services at the site of the proposed new Masonic Temple on Connecticut avenue. Officers and members of the Advisory Board of Masonic Clubs and of the 22 clubs of the District with their families, were special guests.

The open-air services are to be held until October 8. Next Sunday will be Royal Arch Day, and Dr. William S. Abernethy, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, will deliver the sermon.

Virginian Loses $20 to Pickpocket.

A billfold containing $20 was taken from the pocket of Milton H. Bennett, of Aroura Hills, Va., as he stood beside the box office of a downtown theater yesterday afternoon. He told police the pickpocket escaped unnoticed in the crowd.

Traction Group Asked to Share Bridge Costs

Berlin Says Street Cars Cause Big Damage to Calvert St. Span.

Holding that the "present unsafe condition" of Calvert Street Bridge is due largely to heavy loads and vibration caused by the frequent passage of street cars, F. A. Berlin, secretary of the National Board of Trade, in a letter to the Bureau of the Budget, yesterday urged at least 50 per cent of construction costs on a proposed new bridge be borne by the traction company.

Although traction companies are required to pay for all tracking, paving and power connections incident to operating, Berlin pointed out that heretofore the District has furnished funds for the repair and erection of bridges over which the lines run.

"A survey of the Calvert Street Bridge," Berlin's letter read, "leads the National Board of Trade to believe that the present unsafe condition of the bridge was caused largely by the heavy street cars crossing it."

It is evident, he declared, that much of the cost of superstructure and structure of the new bridge should be chargeable to the heavy loads and vibration caused by heavy interstate street cars traveling the route.

In another letter to Lewis W. Douglas, director of the budget, Berlin voiced opposition to using the gasoline tax fund for anything but highway purposes.

Delegates to Be Picked By Jacob Jones Post

Delegates and alternates to represent the U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post No. 2, American Legion women's unit, at the department convention next month, will be selected at a regular meeting of the organization in the Thomas Circle Club, 1326 Massachusetts avenue northwest, tonight.

A report also will be made of the progress the post is making in its "job-a-member" campaign which will close July 31.

Boxing World Well Known To Joe Palooka's Creator

Ham Fisher Attains Life Ambition in Comics Post Will Print.

The story of a youth who wanted to be both a boxer and a cartoonist lies behind the success of one of the most popular comic strips in America—Joe Palooka, which starts in The Washington Post next Sunday. The cartoonist is Ham Fisher.

Palooka is the result of the boyhood ambition of Fisher. His boxing bouts and activities in the world of sports give expression to the artist's love for pugilism.

Ham Fisher and Joe Palooka, both came from Wilkes-Barre. Ham was the local bad boy. Now he's the one who made good. He has been drawing since he was 3 years old. Now he's 30. His parents never encouraged the idea of their son being an artist. In fact, his father tried all known methods to change the youthful Ham's mind. But they wouldn't work.

He went to school, but he didn't bag any records. Finally he got to college. He stayed two weeks. He continued his education by driving a truck. Then he became a clothing salesman, next a house-to-house salesman. Came the war. Ham went.

After the Armistice he secured his first job on a newspaper—a reporter for the Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader. All this time Ham was working on Joe Palooka. He got the idea one day when talking to an especially dumb, but good-natured fighter. When the idea hit him, he gave a whoop and made for his studio, and Joe Palooka was born within a half hour.

He tried to sell the cartoon for two years, but luck was against him all along the line. Finally he borrowed carfare to New York and then things began to start. He clicked with the McNaught Syndicate.

Within a month the strip was sold to a score of the country's leading newspaper. Now, about three years later, Joe Palooka is a personage in every city in the United States. He has been editorialized and compared to Huckleberry Finn. These are things unheard of in the cartoon world. Joe Palooka has become a champ.

This is James Montgomery Flagg's sketch of Ham Fisher, one of America's best known cartoonists, whose chief work—Joe Palooka—will appear in The Post daily and Sunday, beginning next Sunday.

The sporting world knows and likes Ham Fisher. Every training camp and fight gym is open to him. He sees every worthwhile fight from the press box and, generally, the fight fans want to see him as much as they do the contestants.

Ham, in spite of his success, is still just Ham Fisher. Every reader knows Ham because he is Joe Palooka. A regular guy!

Apartment Ransacked After Door Is Forced

Thieves ransacked the apartment of Miss Pauline Baker, 2701 Fourteenth street northwest, yesterday, taking valuable house furnishings and two purses. Entrance to the apartment was gained by forcing the door.

Lorton Rebels Expected to Be At Tasks Today

Some Leaders Are Freed From Solitary; Police Remain on Guard.

The whirr of industry this morning is expected to supplant the sporadically jeer-punctuated calm of the last three days at troubled Lorton Reformatory, signaling the end of a situation that had promised the District its first serious penal institution outbreak.

Twenty-five Metropolitan policemen, equipped for any eventuality, remain at the Lorton prison. They are guarding the approximately 100 purported trouble-makers and are also held against any unexpected excitement.

Capt. M. M. Barnard, general superintendent of District penal institution, spent a busy day yesterday interviewing prisoners and instructing guards in handling the men. He said last night that about half a dozen of the ringleaders had sent word of their penitence and had been released from solitary confinement and shortened rations. He expects more to follow suit.

Just before 7:30 this morning, Capt. Barnard plans to march the men from their mess hall to the shops they work in. Manufacture of license plates and traffic signs is the chief industry at the reformatory, with other shops of a supporting nature.

Barnard has not yet made any definite decision as to punishment of about 100 ringleaders. This bridge he expects to cross after he has gotten the main body of the 1,150 prisoners back to the regular routine of the reformatory.

Yesterday was quiet at the reformatory. The regular prison baseball game was called off, pending the final restoration of order. Other recreation facilities were allowed in a modified form. No visitors were allowed yesterday, though it was the regular day for that privilege of the men.

Tawse Acts Criticized.

A severe "dressing down" was given A. C. Tawse, resigned Lorton superintendent, several weeks ago by the group of District officials supervising local penal institutions, it was learned by The Post last night from an indisputable source.

Charges of favoritism to affluent prisoners were aired at the three-hour hearing given Tawse, and a responsible official expressed the belief that the erstwhile Lorton official saw the "handwriting on the wall."

Out of the welter of Tawse's vicissitudes at the penal institution arose the storm clouds of insurrection that have hovered over the District's hitherto model institution at Lorton, is the conclusion of informed officials.

Bootleggers' Privileges.

This was looked upon, it was learned, not only as a violation of regulations, but as an undermining factor in handling prisoners not receiving such privileges.

A second and more serious matter taken up by the supervisory board with Tawse, it was learned, was the appearance on the streets of Washington of two notorious and well-to-do convicted bootleggers during their terms at the reformatory.

The penal authorities received complaints about the men being seen on the local thoroughfares, apparently at peace with the world. Tawse was definitely connected by the board with these two men's "vacations," it was learned.

Jimmy Thieves Get $30.

Long Plane Hop Wins Hogan for Leader of Chest

Noyes Flies to Coast to Get Attorney's Acceptance of Chair for 1934.

Frank J. Hogan, nationally prominent Washington attorney, has accepted the chairmanship of the Washington Community Chest campaign for 1934, which will be held the latter part of November, according to announcement yesterday by Newbold Noyes, president of the Community Chest.

Mr. Noyes obtained Mr. Hogan's acceptance as the result of an airplane trip to Los Angeles, where the lawyer is working on a legal case. Mr. Noyes stayed only long enough to secure Mr. Hogan's acceptance of the invitation and then flew back again. He had with him a letter of invitation, signed by a number of leaders in the business and civic life of Washington, but Mr. Hogan was known to be under such business pressure that his acceptance in answer to letter or telephone call was held to be unlikely. Indeed, some of Mr. Hogan's closest friends told Mr. Noyes he could not and would not accept, but the flying trip across the continent brought the desired result.

Urgent Crisis Is Faced.

"It is a matter of deep and sincere happiness and satisfaction to me that I am able to make this announcement, said Mr. Noyes, yesterday.

"I believe that never before, even in the dubious days of its inception, has the Chest faced a more urgent crisis than that which confronts it. Convinced as I am that only through the Chest can the charitable and welfare needs of our community be met, it was essential that this year's chairman stand at the head of the community in public esteem and confidence.

"We needed a man keenly aware of the urgency of the hour, sincerely convinced as to the basic merit of the Chest both from the theoretical and the practical point of view, and so endowed with the qualities of inspirational leadership as to swing every man, woman and child in Washington into step behind him, in this year's advance against suffering and distress. We have found such a man in Frank J. Hogan. With all my heart I congratulate our city upon the fact that he has seen his way clear to accept this new and important public service."

Hogan's Statement.

Mr. Hogan sent back with Mr. Noyes a statement for his fellow Washingtonians, in part as follows:

"I am delighted to be able to accept the chairmanship of the Community Chest campaign. The need this winter and in the year ahead will without doubt be the most compelling that our city has ever known. This presents a challenge to every citizen who loves Washington and in whose heart is a spark of sympathy for distressed womanhood and the safety and integrity of the homes of our fellow citizens. As one for whom Washington has done much I am proud and glad of the opportunity to mobilize for human needs all the resources of my home community. I count upon all people, of all races and creeds, uniting to make effective the Community Chest's appeal in behalf of those of all races and creeds, in all kinds of need."

Coal Code Today Seen as Probable

(Associated Press.)

Prepared to work all night in the drive to complete a wage and working hour agreement under a projected code of fair competition for the bituminous coal industry, spokesmen for a subcommittee drawn from bituminous producers and the United Mine Workers of America announced late yesterday a report would be ready by this morning.

After an all-day session, George Harrington, Illinois operator and chairman of the subcommittee, told the operators and miners as they assembled late this afternoon that his group had "nothing to report now," but was hopeful for an agreement within 12 hours. Mr. Harrington refused to say whether the subcommittee had struck a snag.

The union went into the discussions with the proposal that present union contracts be used as a basis for wage rates in the code. Whether differences have arisen over the adjustment of those rates to the various soft coal regions and whether the operators and miners have been able to get together on the complicated problem of minimum hours in view of existing contracts were questions Mr. Harrington left unanswered.

Commercial Printers Expect Code in Month

(Associated Press.)

Hope that a code of operation for the commercial printing industry might be presented to the national industrial recovery administration within a month was expressed yesterday by John J. Deviny, secretary of the industry's conference and program committee.

Regional meetings are being held throughout the country, he said, to select delegates and prepare suggestions for the national conference of the industry in Chicago, July 13 and 14, when the code tentatively prepared here two weeks ago will be submitted for revision and approval by the industry as a whole. The printing industry, Deviny said, was unique in having no minimum wage problem and comparatively little whole time unemployment.

Auto Wrecks at Annapolis and in North Carolina Take Two Lives.

A 19-year-old youth and a retired Marine Corps major, both of Washington, were killed yesterday in automobile accidents near Annapolis, Md., and Kings Mountain, N. C.

George Akridge, employe of a brewing company here, died a few minutes after being extracted from his wrecked machine on the Mayo road near Annapolis. Police said his car was struck head-on by the automobile of George Voss Glossbrenner, 22, of 3336 Fulton street northwest.

Riding in the front seat with Akridge was Miss Violet Sproesser, of 2405 North Capitol street. She suffered severe head injuries and was taken to Emergency Hospital, in Annapolis, with the other injured.

Others Are Injured.

Roy and Fred Calvert, brothers, of the North Capitol street address, and Billy Perry, of 2407 North Capitol street, were discharged after treatment for slight injuries. They were in the Akridge car.

Glossbrenner, suffering severe lacerations and bruises, remained in the hospital as did Miss Sproesser. Miss Marie Gibson, a nurse in the Homeopathic Hospital, a passenger in Glossbrenner's machine, received cuts and bruises.
